ing crowd, and pronounced to be qualified for any emergency but civilizing the barbarous Nicaraguans. They were in the greatest want and destitution, and expressed great joy at finding themselves near their own homes once more. Before leaving Costa Rica, they published a card, inviting their comrades to follow their example, and desert the cause of WALKER, whom they represented to be a villain of the blackest dye. Their passage to the United States was paid by the Government of Costa Rica. From all the accounts we have received, the drama is fast drawing to a close, the conclusion of which will inevitably be the counterpart of what was done by the filibusters with SARAGAN and his companions. WALKER will find no friend to plead for his life. Padre VIGIL has also been designated as one of the victims to be sacrificed to Central American revenge.

The storm on the Isthmus continues to gather fast, and New-Granada is obstinate in her purpose of refusing all the overtures made by the American Government. As Mr. BUCHANAN has expressed himself rather explicitly on future acquisitions of territory, it may reasonably be supposed that strong measures will be adopted to obtain satisfaction and indemnification. The subject is exciting profound sensation in the high circles of Havana, as adducing grounds on which to form a correct estimate of the policy to be pursued towards Spain. It has been proposed to form a company of propellers between this place and Aspinwall, to compete with the American line; but I believe the plan has not found much favor among our merchants, who have been very unsuccessful in all their attempts of steam navigation. Zangronis' Company of European steamers has cured them entirely of all desires to invest in this kind of property. The Spanish Government has been unable to get bidders for carrying the mail between Cadiz and Havana at $30,000 monthly.

The work on the new railroad progresses finely. About five hundred men are now employed. Messrs. LAMA, TORICES, PRESES and ERRAZUS have bought the Colisco Railroad for the sum of $1,400,000, payable $100,000 annually. A branch will be made immediately to Bemba. This road has been extremely unfortunate, and I think the shareholders have done very well in disposing of it to parties who are more competent to manage such things.

Considerable excitement prevailed in our City in the early part of this week, owing to discoveries of false dividends having been declared by the former Director, Señor LAZONA. The shares fell from eighty per cent. premium to par. The subject is being investigated before a magistrate.

The Ravels leave us on the Black Warrior for New-Orleans. They were successful to the last. GOTZCHALK is now at Santi Espiritu. He will give but one more concert in Havana before leaving. The Matanzas Opera Troupe are expected to make a tour through the Southern States. D.

News from Mexico.

New-Orleans papers of Sunday last contain advices from the City of Mexico, by the way of Tampico, to the 17th ult. The country was quiet, except in the Western States. The serious aspect of the difficulty with Spain had given rise to much apprehension. General confidence was expressed in the result of General LAFRAGUA's mission.

The Spanish residents of the Republic appear to be anticipating the threatened attack upon the Republic by their Government at Madrid. They are assuling Mexicans with a high hand. On the 20th ult., 12 of them well armed, attacked the rancho of Olvera, demanded arms of the Mexican proprietor, Sr. OLMA, ill-treating and insulting him, his overseers, and his family and servants, by way of enforcing their demand. On the arms being of necessity delivered to them, they proceeded to demand money, and got $1,200, all that Sr. OLVERA possessed, and then with more threats and insults, locked up all the inmates in the place, and made off with their booty, also taking their horses with them. They were pursued, however, and discovered; six of them seized, $250, the horses, and one of the fire-arms being also recovered.

The Siglo XIX, of the 26th ult., has a lengthy account of the proceedings of Blancarte, from which it appears that while professing determination to submit to government authority, he was, in fact, persisting in acting contrary to orders.

Amusements.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.—The sterling comedy company of this establishment commences a season of genuine entertainments to-night. The caste of the "Rivals" which is given is superb: Sir Anthony, Mr. BLAKE; Jack, Mr. LESTER, Sir Lucius, Mr. BROUGHAM; Falkland, Mr. DROTT; Acres, Mr. WALCOT; David, Mr. GEORGE HOLLAND, Julia, Mrs. HOEY; Lydia Languish, Miss GANNON; Mrs. Malaprop, Mrs. VERNON. Such a combination of rare talent has seldom been witnessed.

NIBLO'S THEATRE.—The glorious RAVELS are still in the ascendency, and attract large and enthusiastic audiences. To-night a new ballet will be produced called "L'Almee," followed by the pantomime of the "Conscript," and preceded by tight-rope exercises.

The Italian Opera Troupe under PAIRE will commence at this house on Monday next.

BROADWAY THEATRE.—A gorgeous spectacle prepared with extreme care, and at unusual cost, will be produced here to-night. It is called the "Last Days of Pompeii," and has some effective dramatic situations which will be ably rendered by the members of the Stock Company, assisted by Mr. LORRAINE.

LAURA KEENE'S THEATRE.—Another petite comedy will be produced here to-night, called "Living too Fast," after which the successful and beautiful piece called "The Elves."

BURTON'S THEATRE.—SHAKESPEARE'S Comedy of the "Winter's Tale" will be revived here to-night, with Mr. J. W. WALLACK, Jr., as Leontes, and Mr. BURTON as Autolycus. It will be produced with the same care which marked the production of this piece at the Chambers-street establishment two years ago.

PURDY'S NATIONAL THEATRE.—"Life in Brooklyn" is the first piece here to-night, followed by "Raoul," and the burlesque of "Clam-sel."

MASONIC CONCERT.—This entertainment is definitively fixed to come off on Saturday next. Miss GLEASON, Mr. OLE BULL, Signor GIANNONI, Signor GARIGNANI, and the Mendelssohn Union have already volunteered their services, and will be sustained by a full orchestra under Mr. G. W. MORGAN.

BARNUM'S MUSEUM.—Mr. C. W. CLARKE, the very active and popular director of amusements at this establishment, takes his benefit to-day and to-night. He has provided an excellent bill, and will be assisted by Mr. and Mrs. E. L. DAVENPORT in the evening, (as Master Walter and Julia, in the play of the "Hunchback,") and by Mr. CHARLES WALCOT and Mr. G. HOLLAND, in the afternoon, (in "Out for a Holiday.") In addition to these distinguished artists, Bryant's Minstrels will discourse much excellent (Negro) music. The frequenters of the Museum have seldom had such an opportunity.

BUCKLEY'S SERENADERS.—The "Essence of Ole Virginny" and "Young America," and the "Old Folks' Concert," with minstrelsy of a very superior quality, are announced for to-night and during the week.

Musical.

The New-York Harmonic Society gives an entertainment to-night at Dodworth's Saloon, on which occasion Dr. LOWE's cantata of the "Seven Sleepers" will be performed. The solos will be rendered by Miss BRAINERD, Miss ANDREW, Mr. GARDNER, Mr. WEST, and other members of the Society, assisted by its full choral strength. After the Cantata, BISHOP's Te Deum and Jubilate will be given, with solos by Mrs. ANNA ELIOT.

SOHRER AT RUTGERS INSTITUTE.—The young ladies of Rutgers Institute gave a musical soirée on Friday evening, under the lead of their teacher, Mr. LASAR. The house was crowded, and the musical performances of the young ladies were excellent. A number of difficult pieces, rarely attempted by young singers, were given with precision and delicacy.

A COMET.—There is a telescopic comet now in the northwestern part of the sky, moving eastward. It was observed through the large equatorial of the National Observatory on Friday night. Its position was as follows:

	R. A.		Decl.
	h. m. s.		°	′
March 27, at.....	6 15 17	1 39 45	+46	37

This comet was discovered in Leipsic, Feb. 22, by Prof. D'ARREST, and on the 26th of March at Newark, N. J., by Mr. VAN ARSDALE.—National Intelligencer.

The Asia, from Liverpool on the afternoon of Saturday, the 21st, with passengers from Liverpool, arrived at this port at 8 o'clock on Saturday morning. The Asia arrived out at 4½ P. M. of the 16th. The steamship Indian arrived at Liverpool at 6 A. M. on Monday, the 16th.

The Asia brings 1,879,000 francs.

The R. M. steamship Circassian sailed from Liverpool on the 7th, but put back on Saturday the 14th, and was again ready for sea by noon of Wednesday, the 18th, but some detention occurred on the part of the Post-Office, and she left on the afternoon of Thursday, the 19th, with a full cargo, and with over 200 passengers for St. John's, Newfoundland.

The Fulton arrived at Cowes, at 11 A. M. of Friday, the 20th.

It is now said that the final sittings of the Paris Conference on Turkish affairs, (which will be chiefly devoted to the question of the Principalities,) will be held in June.

The third meeting of the Neufchatel Conference at Paris will take place shortly, instructions of a more favorable cast having been received from Berlin.

Austria is on the point of breaking off diplomatic relations with Sardinia, and the Sardinian Chamber of Deputies has voted, by 108 to 14, the considerable sum of 5,000,000 francs to put the fortifications of Alessandria into an immediate state of defence.

Full instructions were sent from Cadiz, on the 12th, to Gen. CONCHA, at Havana, respecting the difficulties with Mexico; meantime, the Mexican Envoy has arrived at Madrid.

The Brussels Nord publishes the text of the treaty of peace between Britain and Persia.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times, writing on the 19th of March, says:

The Government received yesterday news from Naples. It is said that a reconciliation with France and England is becoming not merely possible, but probable, and that an attaché of the French foreign office will soon leave for Naples on a private mission.

A Dutch journal, the Nord Brabander, publishes a letter from Batavia, dated the 9th of January, in which it is stated that two British ships of war have forced an entrance into the Japanese port of Nangasaki, breaking through a chain which was stretched across it. This statement is very much in need of confirmation.

The London Times of a recent date contains a list of the British vessels now on the China station. They number fifteen sailing ships and nineteen steamers. Besides these, several first-class war steamers and a squadron of twenty gun boats have recently left England for the seat of the disturbances at Canton, and have taken out over five thousand troops. The Paris Pays says of the French operations:

"France, with a view to the operations of the approaching campaign, keeps Admiral GUERIN's squadron in the Chinese waters, which squadron will join its efforts to those of the naval division commanded by Admiral GENOUILLY; thus our naval force will be on a respectable footing. If the maritime means of France and England are well employed, the Chinese authorities will necessarily improve the previous situation. The more imposing the force employed to support a plenipotentiary the more likely is the better success of the negotiations, for the Chinese will see that they have nothing to gain by continuing hostilities.

It is reported that MEHEMET BEY (the Polish Colonel BANGYA,) with 500 men equipped by English sympathizers, had landed in Circassia, from the English steamer Hengnoes, to aid the Circassians. M. BOUTENEFF, the Russian Minister, at Constantinople, has demanded explanations from Britain on the subject.

The English papers are full of electioneering addresses, almost to the exclusion of other news. There are now six candidates in the field for London. Liverpool is contested by Mr. EVANS (for reelection), THESIGER, and HORNSBALL. Manchester candidates are Sir JOHN POTTER, Mr. GIBSON, and Mr. LOWE. Mr. COBDEN offers himself for Maddersfield.

The Irish Liberal Party are understood to have agreed on this programme for the hustings. The leading points are as follows:

1. Tenant right as recently modified.
2. The disendowment to all religious sects, and the abolition of the Irish Church as a State establishment.
3. Religious freedom and equality, involving the repeal of the ecclesiastical titles act.
4. Opposition to any Ministry which will not comply with the foregoing demands.
5. Enlargement of the County franchise (on the basis of LOCHE KING's motion.)
6. The abolition of the property qualification.
7. The reduction of the qualification for voters in towns to £5.

It is stated that the title under which the Speaker of the House of Commons will go to the House of Lords is that of "Lord BROCKLEY," the right honorable gentleman having property in that part of the County of Middlesex.

The question of a modification of the French Cabinet is, after a long interval, once more among the rumors of the day. The object is believed to be the incorporation of the Cabinet with the Department of State and the imperial household.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

LONDON, Friday, March 20, 1857.

We are still in the crisis, or rather hovering on the verge, before taking the final plunge into the vortex, of a general election. Vortex, indeed, it may be truly called, for Scylla and Charybdis and the Maelstrom put together but faintly typify the whirlpool confusion of party and opinion which now covers the face of this once merry England of ours with scowling suspicion and sinister incredulity, concerning all political professions and professors. To-morrow the present Parliament closes, and ere this day week half the hustings in the kingdom will have given their verdict, not as to this or that policy, for there is none, or to this or that party, for there is none, but as to whether Lord PALMERSTON, at 73, is to guide the destinies of Great Britain how and whither he pleases. That is the sole and exclusive question at issue. That question is submitted in this naked form by his lordship's followers—"appendages," as Lord DERBY calls them, by way of retaliating the sobriquet of "atoms," bestowed on his adherents by Lord PALMERSTON. The opponents of ministers accept that issue also. Mr. DISRAELI, pointing to the appointment of Lord ELGIN as Ambassador to China, after the official declaration that BOWRING and BOWRING's course alone should be in the ascendant, says that the whole aim of the Premier has been to "haste a year"—that is, to carry on Government without the control of Parliament—which the octogenarian functionary is clearly determined to do.

The nomination of ELGIN to China took everybody by surprise here on Saturday, for though public opinion pointed to him as a very eligible person, he was known to have wounded the senior grapes of the Premier, that, moreover, as you were duly informed, he had a motion for Tuesday last condematory of the Government in respect to Anglo-American matters: so sudden and unexpected, even by himself, was the bestowal of this post, that he had not time to withdraw his notice of motion; and there it stood, on the books of the Peers House of Legislature, for two days after the announcement, that the mover had become a servant of the Administration he meant to censure.

The precipitancy of this appointment, and the circumstances under which it takes place, recalls the case of Sir C. NAPIER's nomination to India, amidst the perturbation occasioned by the Sikh war, which was all over, and the business it pertained to disposed of long before the gallant General got to his destination, though he was much more nimble in setting out than ELGIN is likely to be. If any real good was to have been done by such an official, he should have leave, as COBDEN pointed out, by the very steamer that took to Hong Kong the Commons' condemnation of BOWRING's proceedings. Every moment is vital, yet weeks will elapse before ELGIN is ready to start; and when he is ready, he will take the whole business as easy as though the object of his mission were one of congratulation to his Celestial Majesty for having taken to himself a sixteenth rib. ELGIN, it is understood, goes out, when he does go, by way of Paris, where he is to have a conference with Louis NAPOLEON as to the intended part France means to play in these far-off waters. Perhaps, however, that intention may be considerably modified by the arrival, ere long, of the Czar himself, who is believed to have a remarkably knowing eye to affairs in the Flowery Land, and in other lands, too—the land of rose leaves, to wit, namely, Persia, whose Ambassador, ERSUK KAHN, has just arrived here; his hat will be the astonishment of all natives in these latitudes for some time to come, beginning with Lord PALMERSTON himself, a whose usual Saturday night soirée his Excellency will figure to-morrow.

A piece of intelligence still more indicative of Muscovite prescience as to coming events in the Orienta World, is announced to day, namely, that Russia is carrying through Persia, Herat, and along the Caspian, and all those latitudes, such a system of electric telegraph as will give St. Petersburg prior possession of news from India several weeks in advance of London. Does any body suppose that she goes to this expense for nothing, or merely to furnish the Bee with a honey-pot of Hindoo gossip in advance of the Times. Of course if she is asked anything about it she will be prepared with some cock-and-a-bull tale about the necessity of keeping up communications with her Circassian Provinces. Then, by the way, she has again just sustained another defeat by the invincible mountaineers, whose bravery inflicts even a less remarkable blow upon Russian military prestige than ridicule upon that stultified Western diplomacy which excluded the heroic population of the northeast shore of the Black Sea from the circle that should have drawn a ring of fire round the hyperborean Colossus.

Fresh material for Russian astuteness is every day springing up throughout Europe, saying nothing of more remote regions. The animosity between Austria and Sardinia is coming to a head so rapidly that the Ambassador of the former Power at Turin has received instructions to withdraw promptly in case he does not receive satisfactory assurances, which of course he won't, as to the future policy of Piedmont in Italy.

A much more alarming announcement has just been made, in the shape of a most elaborate State paper presented by the French Commissioner at Rome to his own Government, wherein he pronounces a decided judgment against the withdrawal of the French troops in the Papal States, not only now, but within any probable period of time. He states, in great detail, his reasons for this conclusion, and very curious they are; for while proving that the Pontifical Administration is quite a model of clemency and excellence in every respect, he admits that it is so exceedingly good as to be impracticable through native machinery, and must needs be sustained by external force. He confesses that this is a very lamentable condition of things, but contends that it is infinitely wiser for Europe in general, and France in particular, to deal with the necessity in the manner it is being dealt with, than to risk the certain, inevitable and tremendous consequences that would accrue to Italy in the first place, and to the whole Continent immediately afterwards, in the event of the Pope being left to his own resources. The practical bearing of these disclosures on English politics will be very considerable, as soon as the more personal considerations about PALMERSTON, or No PALMERSTON, have somewhat worn down; for it is clear that the concerns of the Continent must speedily and enduringly engage us, let the noble lord endeavor to eschew them as he may by raising the cry of combination against him individually.

Sir JAMES GRAHAM, in addressing his Carlisle constituency the other day, bitingly dealt with this universal cant of coalition, by repeating the saying of BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, that there is no accusation knaves so readily believe as knavery. The met told home, as do all the sayings of this able man, himself about the most unscrupulous among us. If, as the poet says of the passions, "he best can paint them who has felt them most," Sir JAMES ought to be the highest possible authority on all points that affect tortuous conduct or sinister motives; for certainly the burglar of MAHON's letters, the pimp of the Austrian Police, the libeler of many of the officers of the late Crimean War, who were proved to have said and done the very reverse of what he knowingly alleged,—the man who used his own dexterity in debate and official adroitness to run down our poor, harum-scarum, but nevertheless heroic old sea-dog, Admiral NAPIER;—a person of these and innumerable similar antecedents ought to be a judge how far knaves can best appreciate, if not actually relish knavery. Yet, in the very speech so uttered, he also says, and says truly—of such contradictions are we all made up—that it was only a sense of duty that compelled him to relinquish the office of First Lord of the Admiralty, which he held for some time after PALMERSTON became Premier.

On Tuesday evening the stipulations of the treaty with Denmark for the abolition of the Sound Dues, intelligence of the signature of which had been communicated by telegraph, were brought before Parliament by Mr. BRAMLEY-MOORE, who was a member of the Select Committee by whom the subject was investigated last session, and took a decided par against their abolition. As the sum which the country will be called upon to pay for the capitalization of the dues payable by British shipowners and merchants amounts to considerably more than a million sterling, Mr. BRAMLEY MOORE thought that information should be furnished as to the precise stipulations of the treaty. The Chancellor of the Exchequer explained that, though the treaty comes into operation on the 1st of April next, to suit the convenience of the Governments who have made similar treaties with Denmark, and who have no Parliament to consult on the subject, yet the execution of the general treaty has been made, by the seventh article, dependent upon the sanctions required by the constitutions of the respective countries; whilst the separate convention between the British and Danish Governments provides that the amount to be paid by the former as compensation to the latter for the loss of the tolls, in the event of Parliament giving its sanction, shall be paid within three months after the passing of the act required to give effect to the arrangement. In the meantime, the Danish Government will maintain a sort of status quo by taking security from all vessel passing the Sound for the payment of the dues in the event of the treaty failing to receive the sanction of Parliament. The faith of the country is, therefore, by no means pledged, and the new House of Commons will be free to deal with the matter as may seem best.

Two Parliamentary documents have been issued this week which have a close connection with a subject brought under the attention of the British Government by Capt. GALTON, in his recent report on American Railways. Canada, he said, in speaking of the projected railway to the Pacific, should be connected by such communication with Vancouver's Island, and the settlement of the fertile region between Lake Superior and the Red River, which would thus be facilitated, would be the best means of avoiding future difficulties on the subject of the boundary. The first document is a dispatch from Mr. LABOUCHERE to Gov. HEAD, stating that it is the intention of Her Majesty's Government to bring the affairs of the Hudson's Bay Company under the investigation of a Committee of the House of Commons, and desiring him to consider what steps may be necessary to represent the views of the provincial Government. Gov. HEAD replies by inclosing a report of a Committee of the Executive Council, dated the 11th of January last, stating that the general feeling in Canada is that the western boundary of the Province extends to the Pacific; but His Excellency carefully avoids expressing any opinions of his own on this point. The Committee observe that "the tracing and fixing on the ground the line of separation between the United States and these territories is of great importance. The rapid settlement of Minnesota, shortly to be admitted a State of the American Union, renders this the more necessary, for as civilization approaches the boundary, as will be increased the difficulty of maintaining the distinction between the rights of the two nations on the frontier. The Committee have reason to believe that difficulties in this respect have already occurred, or at least have been threatened, and the importance cannot be overrated of early guarding against such." The second paper consists of extracts from the royal instructions to Governor MURRAY, dated 1763, and the letters patent appointing the late and present Governors, defining the boundaries of the province, which, as regards Canada West, are stated to be, on the west, "the channel of Detroit, Lake St. Clair, the River St. Clair, Lake Huron, the west shore of Drummond Island, that of St. Joseph and Sugar Island, thence into Lake Superior;" and on the south, "beginning at the stone boundary between Lancaster and Longueil, Lake St. Francis, the St. Lawrence, the Lake of the Thousand Islands, Lake Ontario, the Niagara River, and Lake Erie." The assumption of the Canadian Committee is thus shown to be baseless, and the prudent precaution of Governor HEAD, in not committing himself to their views, is fully justified.

I now append the promised extracts from the book of travels in Italy frequently referred to, as indicating the writer's (a "British Female's") views of Mr. FILLMORE, and others whom she met in her recent tour:

Monsieur Rochef is better taught than to ask impertinent questions, where he knows they will never be answered, so he pays his money and grumbles, and pays it again, never hoping for any change. Mr. FILLMORE seemed to notice everything in his travels, and to have drawn clear deductions from all he had seen, and we learned much of interest from him during after-conversations. He has a clear voice, and an attractive way of speaking, that seems to possess the power of making you view things from his own level. He appears to enlarge the understanding of his listeners, and you find yourself talking of governments of the difficulties arising from America being divided into such intensely opposite interests; North and South; commerce versus agriculture; Slaves and no Slaves; till you get frightened and stop. Yet there is a deep pleasure in listening and talking thus; it is totally different from English conversation, so bold and free, you shake your wings, as if after long imprisonment you were in the free, pure air, with nothing to stay your flight, if only your wings be unfettered. We were one day talking of the almost impossibility (I mean as a general rule) of the negro becoming an intellectual being; and as their intellectual faculties are unused, so their senses are quickened; their sight how keen, finding the trail, where European eyes discerned no trace of feet. From this we passed to society as large. I said: "In England, the intellectual classes most certainly belong to neither the highest, nor the lowest." "Precisely," said Mr. FILLMORE, "they are of those who have been most obliged to cultivate their faculties; it is with the mind as with the body, if any muscles are unused, they contract and grow smaller; and every power of mind increases in like measure with its use." And as with the mind, so with the spirit, also; the ten talents gain other ten, while the "hidden treasure lies useless." Speaking of agriculture, he said, "he had been greatly struck in England by the way in which the land was urged to the utmost—every bit of ground being cultivated to the greatest extent. Our implements," he added, "are perhaps the best, but it is necessity with us, as labor is scarce, and we have to provide otherwise." He then contrasted the activity and life of England with the decay and languor of Italy. Of the religion, he said; "There is much to cultivate many minds—the music, the painting, the devotion, the equality, high and low kneeling side by side, before their common Father." "Yes, that is very striking," said I. He looked up earnestly, and added, in, I believe, these words: "The most we forget station in religion, the nearer we are to Christianity." The Ex-President admired our writers in the most hearty way; he remarked that MACAULAY's description of the trial of WARREN HASTINGS was a perfect "Daguerreotype of the scene." CARLYLE and the German school did not come in for much praise; but he liked "Gray's Elegy" so entirely, that he had been to Stoke Pogis to see his grave.

With one passage more we conclude:

At Lyons we met some of our American friends, who were there for a marriage, previous to starting off for Switzerland. One of the ladies told me she had crossed the Atlantic seven times; they appear to think it nothing of a journey, and speak of it as we do of crossing the channel. Many of them remain without ever having seen the "motherland," and one impression seemed to have been made on all—that we are not considered a hospitable people—unless to a Mrs. BROWN Brown, who, by abusing the institutions of her own land, has secured the sympathy of part of ours. I think the Americans feel this the more deeply, because it was England who fostered the institution of Slavery upon them. I do not think I met one American, whether Virginia slave-owner or New-York merchant, who do not look on Slavery more or less as an evil; but one thing that now was unavoidable, and they would laugh at the extraordinary way in which Mrs. Brown first creates the premises, and then draws her own conclusions.

Grand Ministerial Banquet in London.

THE PREMIER'S GROUNDS FOR APPEALING TO THE COUNTRY—RELATIONS WITH THE UNITED STATES—SPEECHES OF LORDS PALMERSTON AND CLARENDON.

On the evening of the 31st of March the Lord Mayor of London entertained a numerous and brilliant company of the corps diplomatique and members of both Houses of Parliament at a banquet in the Mansion House. The occasion derived unusual importance from the impending dissolution, and the anticipation that the First Minister would avail himself of the opportunity to explain the grounds of the approaching appeal to the country. Public expectation was not disappointed. The following is:

LORD PALMERSTON'S SPEECH ON THE APPEAL TO THE COUNTRY.

Lord PALMERSTON, who was received with loud cheers, said:

MY LORD MAYOR, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—Often as it has been our good fortune to partake of the splendid hospitalities of the city of London, I may certainly say that it never fell to the lot of any administration to receive these testimonies of courtesy and good will upon a more important and interesting occasion than the present. [Cheers.] We are not deceiving ourselves, my Lord Mayor, when we interpret the manner in which you have been pleased to propose our health as a renewal of that expression of confidence and good will towards Her Majesty's Ministers, which I had the honor of receiving not many days ago from your Lordship, as evidencing the feelings and opinions of the citizens of this great metropolis. [Cheers.] We were not long ago, as is well known, placed in a minority in the House of Commons upon a question which involved a censure upon Her Majesty's Government. I know very well that some of those who honored us with their general support, viewing that question merely as a simple expression of judgment on a particular transaction which had taken place at the antipodes, some months before, persuaded themselves that in giving their votes against the Government, they were not pronouncing a censure upon the Administration; and some of those honorable gentlemen assured me—I am convinced with great sincerity—that they did not intend by the votes they gave to withdraw from the Government the general confidence they had hitherto extended to it. [Cheers.] But the great majority of those who voted knew perfectly well the full political import of their votes. The resolution was that the proceedings which the Government have approved were unjustifiable; and if the Government have approved unjustifiable proceedings, that they followed a course which deservedly must incur the censure of the Parliament and the people of England. We were persuaded, on the contrary, that those proceedings were right and necessary. We felt that great wrong had been inflicted upon this country. We felt that our fellow-countrymen in a distant part of the globe had been exposed to every sort of insult, outrage, and atrocity [loud cheers]; that a treaty with this country had been broken; and that those who were locally charged with the defence of our interests were not only justified in resorting, but were bound to resort, as far as the means at their command enabled them, to the measures requisite for their vindication. We felt that we should have been basely betraying a trust which our Sovereign and the country had reposed in us if we had not approved proceedings which we thought right, and which if we had been placed in similar circumstances we should certainly have deemed it our duty to adopt. [Cheers.] Well, my Lord Mayor, in ordinary cases, when the [illegible] Sound Dues Convention.

As already announced, the treaty for the abolition of the Sound Dues was signed on the 14th of March. The following is an abstract of its provisions:

By Art. 1, Denmark engages not to levy any customs, tonnage, light-house or other dues whatsoever on vessels or their cargoes which pass by the Belts or the Sound; nor to delay or embarrass, in any way whatsoever, such vessels; nor to impose upon such of them as may enter or leave Danish ports the dues which were formerly paid to the Belts or the Sound; nor to increase the existing taxes in those ports.

By Art. 2, Denmark undertakes to preserve and maintain, in the best order all the lights, buoys, &c., &c., at the entrance or approaches of its ports or harbors, and along its coasts; also to maintain the buoys, &c., in the Cattegat, the Sound, and the Belts; likewise to watch over the service of pilotage in those waters, and to see that the charges for them are moderate, &c.

Art. 3 declares that the stipulations of the two preceding articles shall come into effect on the 1st April, 1857.

Art. 4 enacts that, in return for these concessions, the contracting powers shall pay Denmark 30,470,466 rix dollars in certain specified portions, each power, however, being only responsible for the payment of its own portion.

Art. 5 allows the payment to be made in forty half-yearly payments.

Art. 6 says that the time and place of, and other matters respecting such payments, shall be regulated by special treaty with Denmark.

By Art. 7, it is enacted that the execution of the preceding conditions, as regards constitutional States, is subject to the rules and formalities established in such States.

Art. 8 provides that the exchange of the ratifications of the treaty shall take place by a given date.

Mr. Buchanan's Inaugural.

From the London Times, March 21.

The Inaugural Message of the new American President will perhaps disappoint those who waited for its arrival with anxiety. It would seem that, though the forms of a Monarchy and a Republic may differ, the teachings of political experience are the same in both. The session of the British Parliament is annually opened with a royal speech, a composition which has been the butt of several generations of satirists, but which keeps its ground because it is exactly suited to the circumstances of our political life. Ministers who do not wish to appear without a policy, and are yet unwilling to commit themselves, find the meagre but significant paragraphs of a speech from the Throne the best means of indicating their intentions with a prudent vagueness. The American Republicans from the beginning refused to countenance such brevity; they would have a clear narrative of the past and a clear plan of the future, from the hand of their Chief Magistrate. Yet, as the concerns of the country become more extended, as the relations between the States become more delicate and complicated, as the Republic is brought more and more into connection with the Powers of Europe, as questions of foreign policy assume greater importance, we find that the Messages of the Presidents are more cautious and reserved, and that those, powerful and almost irresponsible rulers imitate the Sovereign, if they are denied the conveniences of a Royal Speech. Mr. BUCHANAN has perhaps spoken frankness after the most explicit contrast of recent times. Since our own Reform Bill there has been nothing like it on either side the Atlantic. Americans generally disposed to laugh at the predictions of dissension and disruption which are sometimes heard in English society, and to set them down as the voice of ignorance or jealousy, admitted that they could not help taking a serious view of the struggle of 1856. The anger and boisterous invective of the Southern States, the bitter resentment of the North, the national excitement of the Abolitionists, and the deeds of blood in Kansas, made the contest an anxious struggle. Add to this that the foreign policy to which Mr. BUCHANAN had given his sanction at Ostend justly roused the apprehensions of more than one foreign State. England, Spain, Mexico, and even France, were all more or less interested in the question whether a statesman should be raised for four years to power far greater than that of a Constitutional Minister, after having seemingly subscribed to doctrines which, carried into action, would give foreign States no alternative between undignified submission and forcible resistance. As it was, the relations between England and the States were still unsettled; the questions relating to the Bay Islands and Nicaragua were still the subject of negotiation; and a hostile President might delay for an indefinite term the desired solution. We and all the world, as well as the Americans, took the deepest interest in the election, and, when that was decided, waited with something of impatience for the new President's political programme. This document we have at last, but it falls far short of satisfying the curiosity which has been awakened.

Mr. BUCHANAN is certainly the most distinguished politician who has been elected to the Presidency during the last 20 years. More than one of his predecessors have merely profited by political combinations or political jealousies. When one section would not tolerate the leading man of another section, both united to raise to the highest place some one whose mediocre qualities disarmed apprehension and dislike. But Mr. BUCHANAN is the leading man of his party; he is first in ability, as in place, among the Democratic politicians of his country. We cannot suspect him of weakness, or imagine him to be sincerely commonplace; we may therefore attribute to his experience and judgment the singular moderation and indefiniteness of the present Message. The President commences by saying that, having determined not to be a candidate for reelection, he has no object but faithfully to serve his country during his term of office, and to live in the memory of his countrymen. As at the expiration of his Presidency Mr. BUCHANAN will be in his 70th year, we can well understand that he is anxious to conclude worthily a long political life by his conduct during the next four years, without looking further into futurity. The President then declares his adherence to the principle now recognized by the country,—that the will of the majority in each territory or State shall determine the establishment of domestic Slavery. "Congress is neither to legislate Slavery into any territory or State nor to exclude it therefrom, but to leave the people thereof perfectly free to form and regulate their domestic institutions in their own way, subject only to the Constitution of the United States." This principle Mr. BUCHANAN represents, and its annunciation is nothing new. By it Slavery and non-slavery are allowed to battle it out between them without the interference of any controlling authority. Slavery may force its way up to the British frontier, and Freedom may carve for itself new dominions out of the wilds of Texas. Consequence and boundary lines are now effaced. Territory will be won by either of the two systems, according to the energy and progress of its representatives. "May we not, then," says Mr. BUCHANAN, "hope that the geographical parties to which the question has given birth will become speedily extinct?" Thus is the terrible problem solved by the new Government of the United States.

The President then proceeds to point out the folly and want of patriotism displayed by those who during the late struggle hinted at and even advocated the disruption of the Union. We need not follow him into his arguments that the preservation of this great confederacy tends to the development and civilization of every part. The fullness of the American Treasury is the gratifying subject of the next few paragraphs. This plethora of income has, it appears, given rise to wild schemes of expenditure, and called into existence a race of jobbers who threaten to corrupt the virtue of the Republic. As "a relief from this embarrassment," the President proposes to appropriate the surplus to great national objects, the extinction of the public debt, a reasonable increase of the navy, and the defence of the extended seacoast. The squandering of the public money, it is then urged, sinks into insignificance compared with the waste of the public lands, and the President calls attention to the powers inherent in Congress and in the several States with regard to this subject. The next point is the necessity of a military road from the Atlantic States to California, so that in case of war reinforcements might be sent to the Far West without the necessity of passing round the Horn or across the Isthmus. It will be seen that these topics are of a domestic character, and neither in themselves nor in the manner in which they are treated do they exhibit anything novel or striking. The convulsion of the electoral struggle has certainly passed away, to be succeeded by a soothing calm of domestic improvement.

But what of the new President's foreign policy? Into what are the Monroe doctrine and the Ostend Manifesto to be developed by the triumphant champion of the Democrats? To these questions the Inaugural Message affords but vague answers. The corresponding paragraphs are devoted to "our rights and duties as a member of the great family of nations." The duties, as defined by Mr. BUCHANAN, are such as might satisfy the most scrupulous international lawyer. To cultivate peace, commerce, and friendship with foreign nations, not only with a view to material interest, but in a spirit of Christian benevolence, to employ a diplomacy which shall be direct and frank, to cherish a sacred regard for the independence of nations,—such are the principles of public policy which are to guide the conduct of Mr. BUCHANAN and Mr. CASS. We are, however, next brought to the application of these principles as understood by their propounder. The United States, we are told, have never extended their dominions by the sword, for Texas was annexed by the vote of a free people, and that half of the Mexican territory which was added to the Union ten years ago was fairly purchased after the Mexican armies had been beaten. While the American Government continues to act on this principle "no nation will have a right to interfere or complain if in the progress of events we shall still further extend our possessions." These are the most marked indications we can gain of the President's policy. To acquire territory he looks upon as natural and praiseworthy, if it be the will of the majority of the actual settlers, or the stipulations of a pecuniary bargain. The application we must leave to the individual judgments of our readers. However, these are but lame doctrines after the Ostend Manifesto. On the whole, we [illegible]

[illegible] Albert on the Education of the Poor.

On the afternoon of March 20, Prince ALBERT, accompanied by the Prince of Wales, publicly opened [illegible] the newly erected poor schools at the [illegible] Lane, London. In answer to the welcome addressed to him, the Prince said:

"Gentlemen, and gentlemen, promoters and supporters of these schools. I thank you heartily for your [illegible] cordial welcome. Madrid (March 11) Correspondence of the London Times.

As regards the general question of a war with Mexico, I sincerely disbelieve that it will come to actual hostilities, while those who are less confident of a pacific termination of the quarrel have evil forebodings—not with respect to the result of the conflict itself, or even to the amount of the expense it must entail, and which it can ill afford, but on account of the island of Cuba, the safety of which they fear will be in some way compromised. It is easy for people in Spain to count up the guns and battalions that protect that precious colony, and to reckon on them for its defence, but I know that their confidence is not shared by many persons who have been on the spot, and in the best position to estimate the chances. What they say is, that let Spain do what she will, and no matter how staunch the garrison and how loyal the colonists of Cuba, the island will be America[illegible]

American Railways.

From the London Times.

The first sight of an American Railway map, to use a vulgarism, "quite takes one aback." An impression is produced rather akin to what we receive when a friend whom we have not cast eyes on for 15 or 20 years comes across us, and reminds us forcibly of the fact "how old we are getting." Here is a part of the world which we have scarcely left off picturing to ourselves as aboriginal and fresh from the great act of Creation completely intersected by railways. Omitting all the intermediate stages between Chaos and Bradshaw, it has taken a violent leap into time, and from the very first seized hold of the latest results of civilization. A network of 26,000 miles of railway now covers the United States. This has been accomplished principally by Irish labor, and it is unnecessary to say that the cost of construction has been very small, compared with that in this country. This single article of the difference in the value of land would, of course, make an enormous difference. The cost of construction per mile on the New-York and Massachusetts Railways has been £10,000 to £12,000, as compared with £26,000 on British Railways. We quote the very interesting Report on the Railways of the United States, by Capt. DOUGLAS GALTON.

The cheapness of land has been one great cause, as we have just said, of this sudden and wonderful creation, more particularly as grants of land are often made, especially in the Western States. Let us take the Illinois Central Railway as an example of this method of railway-making. Congress granted to the State of Illinois 2,595,000 acres. The vacant lands, in alternate sections, within six miles of the road were conveyed by direct terms in the grant, and, in lieu of such portions as had been previously sold, selections were authorized to be made between 6 and 15 miles on each side of the road. The Company raised 20,000,000 dollars by mortgage upon the security of this land, reserving, however, 200,000 acres towards the annual payment of the interest. At the same time they call in 25 per cent. of a capital stock of 17,000,000 dollars. This pays for the Illinois Central Railway, which is, therefore, in fact, given to the Company, with the exception of the quarter which they take from their own stock. The State only charges 7 per cent. on the profits of the railway as a compensation for its gift of land, and thus a railway of 350 miles, which forms the backbone of Illinois, and connects Cairo with Dubuque, is built at a cost to the Company of 4,500,000 dollars.

But the most remarkable feature which this report brings out is the energy and impetus with which the Americans have rushed in medias res at once in the construction of their railways. This explains the rapidity and the small cost of this vast work more than the cheapness of land or the grants of land. There are some persons who cannot begin to work till they have a perfect tool. They are fidgety and uncomfortable without it; they wait and wait and delay operations indefinitely till their tool is nicely ground, polished and shaped, and a convenient handle put to it. There are others who won't wait, but take the first tool they can get and work with it. A bad tool is worse than a good one, but in the meantime they are doing so much work while the others are doing nothing, but only waiting. It depends, of course, on what the department of work is which of these two methods is the best. "An epic poem requires the very best tools and waiting; a speech at the hustings or in Parliament must be made with whatever tool comes to hand—i. e., with the best kind of expression we can summon at the moment. Some persons, however, cannot bring themselves to speak till they have hit on the very best word. The late Archbishop of Canterbury was so fastidious in his choice of words, that he used to keep his audience painfully waiting till he had tried one word after another to see how it would fit, and, as this process took place once or twice in every sentence, the constant search for perfection was hardly repaid by the tardy discovery. In matters of "time and tide," and over which that great power to which one of the seven wise men consecrated the result of a life's wisdom, "Opportunity," presides, it seldom answers to wait very long for your machinery. In war, for instance, you cannot.

The object for which railways are wanted in America is in one very important respect different from that in this country; they are wanted not simply as railways, but as roads, not only to quicken communication between different towns, but to open a way into the heart of large spaces of territory, and to carry off their produce. The railway is the carrier there. Railroads, as Captain GALTON informs us, are cheaper than roads; there would not be funds forthcoming for making even tolerable roads over the vast prairies of the West; but the railway comes before the road in this extraordinary world of inversions; it is the aboriginal road of the West, performing the very first function which the new country wants—that of opening it to human industry and affording a channel by which the results of that labor can make their way to a purchaser. "When first opened, three years ago," says Captain GALTON of the Illinois Central Railway, "the station-houses were almost the only habitations on the line; now there is a large village at each station, surrounded by vast tracts of cultivated ground. When I passed along the line last Autumn stacks of corn covered every available spot round the stations, and the means of the company were scarcely adequate to removing them." With boundless tracts of land, then, lying idle and waiting to be used—land which will give an enormous return to cultivation, it is obviously not the interest of the American to delay his railway till he can make one with the best curves and the most even rails. He has to afford to wait for a chef d'œuvre of engineering; no, every minute is lost that this land lies idle, and therefore he lays down a railway good enough to take him into the heart of this profitable region, and set him down there with plow and spade, and a channel of conveyance for the produce of his farm. He lends the railway to his temporary object, and makes it serve the purpose he wants at the time he wants it. e. g., now. He clears his end, and does not mind sharp curves and inclined planes. This is making the most of the instrument in his own case, and wielding it most victoriously and effectively. The Baltimore and Ohio Railway, as first made, avoided an expensive tunnel by "a series of zigzags, ascending over a hill by a gradient of 1 in 18 at its steepest part, each zigzag terminating in a short level space, so that the train was run up one zigzag on to this level space, and then backed up the next zigzag, and so on." This eccentric expedient was superseded by a tunnel afterwards, but the American would not wait for perfection before he had his railway in the first instance. We wish our Indian authorities would take a hint from American expedition. They go on waiting for perfect engineering, and doing nothing till they can do everything as it is done in this country. The Americans would have covered India with railways before now. The mode of raising funds for the construction of railways by means of grants of lands is, perhaps, a useful hint to our Australian authorities.

It would, however, be doing injustice to the American railways to omit the great convenience and good accommodation which they afford, notwithstanding the haste of their construction. Indeed, it is one of the most remarkable characteristics of the system how it combines roughness and expedition in the construction of the railway with convenience and refinement in the railway furniture and carriages, even greater in many respects than those we have in this country. The average American is perhaps more particular about indoor comfort even than the average Englishman; he carpets his churches, and complains of our cold rooms. The railways humor these tastes, and the carpets, the cushions, the chairs with backs, that can be put either way, the room for moving about, the lights, and the warm-air pipes, put all except our first-class carriages to shame. The ingenious contrivance on the New-York and Erie Railway, of a funnel which conveys air down into a chamber, where it is purified by spray forced up from jets below, and thence makes its way through the car, is a specimen of American railway indulgence to Summer travelers. The slanting windows and the screens of tarred canvass for throwing off the dust show the same consideration, while the use of a bell instead of a whistle on leaving stations proves a regard for the human ear at which we have not arrived in this country.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

BY TELEGRAPH FROM LONDON TO LIVERPOOL.

We are indebted to Capt. LOTT, of the Asia, for the following telegraphic intelligence, received at Liverpool just previous to the sailing of the Asia.

LONDON, Saturday, March 21.

Parliament was formally dissolved to-day. The Queen did not attend in person, and the Royal Speech was delivered by the Chancellor as follows:

MY LORDS AND GENTLEMEN: We are commanded by Her Majesty to inform you that, in releasing you at this early period from your attendance in Parliament, it is Her Majesty's intention immediately to dissolve the present Parliament in order to ascertain in the most constitutional manner the sense of Her people in the present state of public affairs.

GENTLEMEN OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS: We are commanded by Her Majesty to thank you for the liberal provision which you have made for the exigencies of the public service during the period that will elapse before the new Parliament, which Her Majesty will direct immediately to be called, shall have been able to give its deliberate attention to these matters.

My Lords and Gentlemen, we are commanded by Her Majesty to express the satisfaction which she feels at your having been able to reduce materially during the present session the burdens of her people. Her Majesty commands us to assure you that it is her fervent prayer that the several constituencies of the United Kingdom upon whom will devolve the exercise of these high functions which by the constitution belongs to them, may be guided by an all wise Providence to the selection of representatives whose wisdom and patriotism may aid Her Majesty in her constant endeavors to maintain the honor and dignity of her Crown and to promote the welfare and happiness of her people.

TRINITY CHURCH MATTERS.

I cannot leave this branch of the subject (Trinity's provision for the poor) without alluding to the fact that the Honorable Senator from the Twenty-second, even while making the remarkable declaration that this Corporation has never shown our scintilla of spiritual feeling, was compelled, most unwillingly, as it seemed to me, and probably only from the conviction that it was necessary to break the force of what must be admitted to have been a most intemperate and unjustifiable expression, at a subsequent stage of the discussion, to admit that those who minister at Trinity's altars are without blame. But it is this Vestry, this Corporation, he says, which he would have figure in the eye of the law as criminal. And who constitutes this Vestry? Twenty-two gentlemen, as nearly without reproach as any twenty-two that could be selected within the great metropolis. And why are they denounced? Because they are an old-fashioned set like our Hamiltons, Jays and Kings. Because they will not sell or disturb the corpus estate of Trinity or part with any of the property of the Church. One of the vestrymen is Gulian C. Verplanck. Is he to be impeached upon this floor? Who that knows Mr. Verplanck does not know him as a man of most unostentatious manner and liberal life; as one who has devoted twenty years of his life to the emigrant, for whose good, as a Commissioner of Emigration, he has constantly labored? And is he one whom the Senator from the Twenty-second would impeach?

There is Gen. Dix, too; a name not unknown in the State of New-York; he also is a member of this Vestry. A man of letters, distinguished among his compeers, and who has already achieved an exalted place in statesmanship. And is he one whom the Senator from the twenty-second would impeach?

Aye, but will the Senator say, "these are not the men—I do not impeach these." Then I reply that they demand, and their fellow Vestrymen demand, that those who you do intend to impeach you shall impeach by name, and not attempt to cast a stigma upon all who in temporal or spiritual affairs administer to the Church.

The Honorable Senator would not disturb the clergy; the clergy who he admits have been so constant in their ministrations at the altar, and in their attendance at the homes of the poor, although by the provisions of his bill he would let loose upon these pious and devoted men an unbridled power which would drive them out to starve. But he only desires to disturb the Vestry—the corporation—and his charges are only levelled at that corporation, who in the exuberance of what is itself an insane frenzy, the Honorable Senator declares, are "not fit for a madhouse." I concur with the Honorable Senator that a Vestry who through nearly 160 years have administered the vast properties of this Church without the occurrence of a single malversation in office, and without the loss of a single dollar to the revenues of the Church, and under whose prudential management this property has grown from an inconsiderable estate to its present value of four to six millions of dollars—are not fit for a madhouse.

And at this point of the debate, Mr. Chairman, I desire to introduce to the Senate the successors to this ancient and honorable Vestry, through their proclamation which is even now lying on our desks. It is signed by gentlemen of New-York, who already in imagination seem to suppose this question decided by the Senate, and they about to enter upon the property of the church. It has received the indorsement of the Hon. Senator from the 22d, who by his quotations from the document has recognized its authority. It seeks to relieve the country of the apprehension which it might well entertain from the establishment of this revolutionary committee in power, by declaring in advance that the Committee believe and it has been proven that "THERE IS ENOUGH FOR ALL!"

It is clear, then, that these gentlemen who seem disposed to allow the clergy to remain, do not mean to steal that golden service long since presented to Trinity by one of the churches of England; that they do not intend to take the Communion dishes from her altar; that they do not even design to dispossess us of our parochial duties and labors, our daily ministrations to the poor. Oh, no! They simply desire kindly to relieve us of the bulk of our property! They propose to allow the church, even, to stand; it is only her patrimony they seek. They will not deprive Trinity of all, but will be content to allow her to remain as a partner with them in her own property.

Sir, the serene satisfaction with which these men have elected themselves to this vestry is worthy of especial comment. Neither Jack Cade nor Reuben Rollin ever proposed anything better. All Jacobinism stands without its parallel. The attacks upon the nobleses of France, when untold millions of property fell the prey of plebeian rapacity, furnishes the only fit illustration which my mind can recall to express my abhorrence of this outrageous proposition. Why, it is as much as though this Senate should wait upon Mr. Astor, and after assuring him that they did not desire to dispossess him, should modestly request to be taken in as partners in his vast property on the ground that there is "enough for all."

This Committee have, in one thing at least, given evidence of their sagacity. They have chosen a profitable time to enter upon possession; a time when two long leases are about to expire—one in 1854 and one in 1856—when two millions of property would fall into their hands for distribution. But will the Senate pause to consider where this will end? To inquire whether it will not be obnoxious to moral, no less than physical laws, gravitate on—on—on, to the bottom? To-day the first two millions are divided up. Then comes the next division, and the next; and also for the Church—alas for the country when the property of ancient Trinity is thus despoiled.

Mr. Chairman, the honorable Senator does not speak for the dead, but for the future generations of mankind. If this be so, why not let this vast church property remain for the benefit of the future generations of mankind, and not disperse it to the four winds of heaven. Why does he seek by his bill to deprive this ancient and loyal corporation of its independence? Why does he seek to degrade it beneath the level of the humblest hamlet in the western wilds?—for it will be the only one that is left without independence. It will be governed no longer by its own honorably elected vestry, but by the revolutionary Committee thrown upon it by this wave of Jacobinism that now threatens the destruction of the American Church. The whole Christian world would be shaken by her disgrace.

And again I ask, Mr. Chairman, why should this wrong be done? Trinity is rich, but her riches are of legitimate growth. She has not shared in the general prosperity which has vast commercial centres of Gotham owned to the metropolis of the Empire State, by connecting the river with the lake, and throwing open to us the western wilds. You might as well complain of those old Dutchmen whose cabbage-gardens are now covered with palaces, as to blame Trinity because, beneath a wise guardianship, her once humble possessions have swelled into great and coveted wealth.

But the corporation of Trinity Church are further reproached for unfaithfully returning the value of their real estate. It will be recollected that their vestry consists of twenty-two individuals, widely differing in views and pursuits and means of knowledge. It is a moral impossibility that all could unite in the same valuation. There was no common standard of value to which they could possibly refer, except the official valuation of the City assessors who are sworn to value truly all the lands in the City. If it be said that the assessors never do in fact value lands at their full market value, it may also be said that the fact is perfectly notorious to every one—and that every one is equally competent to add such proportionable rates to the assessed value, as experience may suggest. The only statement really important for the Church to return, and solely within their knowledge, is a true exhibit of the location and size of their lots—that being given, every one is furnished at once with the means of valuing each separate lot. The Church have practised no concealment in this matter. On the contrary, they explicitly state in their returns to the Legislature of 1856 (Senate Doc. No. 65, page 4, line 16) that they return the value "as assessed in 1855 by the officers of the City for the purpose of taxation." If this return did not correspond with the assessors' book, then, and then only, will the Church deserve censure.

The true object of the legislative inquiry is to ascertain, not the speculative or estimated value of the land held by the church, but what is its actual income—in a word, what are the existing pecuniary means of the Vestry, to sustain the sacred cause committed to their charge. The rent of a lot is a thing certain to be known; the value of a lot cannot be certain. The great cardinal fact necessary to be known and truly returned is the actual pecuniary income of the land; and that they state precisely in dollars and cents, as being $71,201 97. If that fact be untruly stated, then and then only are the Church deserving of censure. They also return the amount of their debt as being $646,912, and that the interest is $31,695. If these facts be untruly stated, then and then only are the Church deserving of censure. And next as to the return of the number of corporators. The Church return that there are 213 pew-holders. It now turns out by close scrutiny, that a few of them are dead, and that some have removed from the parish. But of what practical importance is it, whether the corporators are 213 or 112, or 50?

If the corporators legally own the property, it matters not whether their number be great or small. The rights of 50 are just as sacred as the rights of 300.

And so of the communicants; it matters not whether the number be 98 or 52. The question is, have they the legal right?

If it be said that the number is too small to control so large a fund, let it be remembered that every man of full age who chooses, can become a communicant and a corporator. He needs only to take the communion and then to hand his name and residence to the minister. No man has ever yet been refused [illegible]

[illegible] for their sanctuary, as "[illegible] Quince as security in their law [illegible] since 1845, the maintenance of the Episcopalian [illegible] being incompatible with the new order of things. The King consents to renounce them, but without these charitable establishments to be preserved. It is thought that Switzerland will raise objections to the title of Prince of Neufchatel.

TRINITY CHURCH MATTERS.

I cannot leave this branch of the subject (Trinity's provision for the poor) without alluding to the fact that the Honorable Senator from the Twenty-second, even while making the remarkable declaration that this Corporation has never shown our scintilla of spiritual feeling, was compelled, most unwillingly, as it seemed to me, and probably only from the conviction that it was necessary to break the force of what must be admitted to have been a most intemperate and unjustifiable expression, at a subsequent stage of the discussion, to admit that those who minister at Trinity's altars are without blame. But it is this Vestry, this Corporation, he says, which he would have figure in the eye of the law as criminal. And who constitutes this Vestry? Twenty-two gentlemen, as nearly without reproach as any twenty-two that could be selected within the great metropolis. And why are they denounced? Because they are an old-fashioned set like our Hamiltons, Jays and Kings. Because they will not sell or disturb the corpus estate of Trinity or part with any of the property of the Church. One of the vestrymen is Gulian C. Verplanck. Is he to be impeached upon this floor? Who that knows Mr. Verplanck does not know him as a man of most unostentatious manner and liberal life; as one who has devoted twenty years of his life to the emigrant, for whose good, as a Commissioner of Emigration, he has constantly labored? And is he one whom the Senator from the Twenty-second would impeach?

There is Gen. Dix, too; a name not unknown in the State of New-York; he also is a member of this Vestry. A man of letters, distinguished among his compeers, and who has already achieved an exalted place in statesmanship. And is he one whom the Senator from the twenty-second would impeach?

Aye, but will the Senator say, "these are not the men—I do not impeach these." Then I reply that they demand, and their fellow Vestrymen demand, that those who you do intend to impeach you shall impeach by name, and not attempt to cast a stigma upon all who in temporal or spiritual affairs administer to the Church.

The Honorable Senator would not disturb the clergy; the clergy who he admits have been so constant in their ministrations at the altar, and in their attendance at the homes of the poor, although by the provisions of his bill he would let loose upon these pious and devoted men an unbridled power which would drive them out to starve. But he only desires to disturb the Vestry—the corporation—and his charges are only levelled at that corporation, who in the exuberance of what is itself an insane frenzy, the Honorable Senator declares, are "not fit for a madhouse." I concur with the Honorable Senator that a Vestry who through nearly 160 years have administered the vast properties of this Church without the occurrence of a single malversation in office, and without the loss of a single dollar to the revenues of the Church, and under whose prudential management this property has grown from an inconsiderable estate to its present value of four to six millions of dollars—are not fit for a madhouse.

And at this point of the debate, Mr. Chairman, I desire to introduce to the Senate the successors to this ancient and honorable Vestry, through their proclamation which is even now lying on our desks. It is signed by gentlemen of New-York, who already in imagination seem to suppose this question decided by the Senate, and they about to enter upon the property of the church. It has received the indorsement of the Hon. Senator from the 22d, who by his quotations from the document has recognized its authority. It seeks to relieve the country of the apprehension which it might well entertain from the establishment of this revolutionary committee in power, by declaring in advance that the Committee believe and it has been proven that "THERE IS ENOUGH FOR ALL!"

It is clear, then, that these gentlemen who seem disposed to allow the clergy to remain, do not mean to steal that golden service long since presented to Trinity by one of the churches of England; that they do not intend to take the Communion dishes from her altar; that they do not even design to dispossess us of our parochial duties and labors, our daily ministrations to the poor. Oh, no! They simply desire kindly to relieve us of the bulk of our property! They propose to allow the church, even, to stand; it is only her patrimony they seek. They will not deprive Trinity of all, but will be content to allow her to remain as a partner with them in her own property.

LEGEND.—The mountain forests of Pastoria are inhabited, it is said, by fairies, spirits and Elves, who, like the Phantom Dancers of Germany, delight to entrap travelers into their realms and terrify them with their mischievous antics. Having the power of transforming the spirit, they often, in their malicious gambols, give life to the newly dead. Stones, rocks and trees are seen fantastically moving in the forest, but it is only during the day they retain their fictitious existence; at the approach of night they resume their immobility.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, and Comptroller, and the Commissioners for the removal of Sunken Vessels, visited Sagwine's Point on Saturday [illegible]. They have concluded to purchase the Point [illegible] as possible. They intend, at first, to make [illegible] accommodations there for yellow fever [illegible], and then, at their leisure, to turn the [illegible] into a permanent Quarantine. Some doubts exist in the minds of the [illegible] as to the propriety of making the [illegible] a permanent Quarantine—first, because [illegible] question as to whether the anchorage [illegible] that portion of the Lower Bay is sufficiently [illegible] and deep; and, secondly, because of the disadvantage [illegible] the Point to the main channel. We [illegible] that the whole question is to be [illegible] at Albany very soon—soon enough to meet [illegible] of the part. In view of the safety of [illegible] health, we are glad to know that something will be done promptly.

[illegible] steamship Asia, which left Liverpool on the 21st ult., and arrived at this port on Saturday morning, we receive four days' later news than [illegible]. The English papers are filled with election addresses and intelligence. Six candidates are in the field for London. Sir JOHN PORTMAN and the Right Hon. ROBERT LOWE are the Tory candidates for Manchester, and Mr. COBDEN, the issue of the dissolution and all the excitement, is obliged to abandon the West Riding of Yorkshire and look for a more friendly and less important constituency. The issue in the approaching contest seems to depend as much on the personal popularity of Lord PALMERSTON as on the merits of the China question, and there is every reason to believe that the Premier will be sustained by the people. At a grand Ministerial banquet given by the Lord Mayor of London on the 20th ult., Lord PALMERSTON delivered a most effective speech in vindication of his policy with regard to China and the dissolution of Parliament. Mr. BUCHANAN's inaugural address has been received in Europe. It is regarded favorably by leading British journals. Large reinforcements from both France and England had left, or were about to leave, for the seat of war in China.

From the Continent we have nothing of special importance. The Neufchatel Conferences at Paris were progressing, and with better prospects of a satisfactory termination. Austria and Piedmont are said to be on the eve of quarrelling. Enemies they are, and must be, so long as the one is the oppressor and the other the champion of Italian liberties. There is also a report that a reconciliation of Russia and England with Naples is highly probable, but upon what terms we are not advised. People are getting tired of hearing about the "Spanish preparations against Mexico," and some think there will be no war after all. It looks now very much as though the storm would blow over.

Elsewhere we publish extracts from private letters received by the Texas, concerning the movements of Gen. WALKER in Nicaragua. They are confirmatory of the first reports of Gen. WALKER's success at Rivas, and speak hopefully of his ultimate success.

Various matters of interest were acted upon in the State Senate on Saturday. A bill was reported regulating regulations for the port of New-York, it being one of a series recommended by the Harbor Commissioners. It is intended to provide against the filling up of the rivers and harbor by ashes and other rubbish. Bills were reported establishing a uniform standard of gas, and providing for the appointment of a Gas Inspector; but as this session is so far advanced they will not probably be acted upon until the next. A report was made relative to the condition of the Savings Banks in the State, in which a high compliment is paid to their management generally. The bill abolishing days of grace on sight drafts was passed. The New-York Charter bill was referred to a Committee of eight to perfect.

Advices from Fort Dodge, Iowa, state that a settlement of twenty families at the head-waters of the Des Moines River had been attacked by a party of Indians, and the supposition was that all had been murdered, or carried into captivity. Some had been shot, and others clubbed to death. A company of whites had been organized to pursue the Indians and take vengeance upon them.

The Sachems of Tammany Hall are continuing their labors of love, towards harmonizing the somewhat discracted elements of the City Democracy. A private meeting was held on Saturday, at which some of the sachems backed out from the scheme previously promulgated for new primary elections of members of the Democratic Committee, and offered a substitute, by which each of the five Committees should nominate one member, and the Sachems a third, in each Ward, to constitute the new Committee. Another meeting for the discussion of the matter is to be held to-day. In another column, we give a detailed account of the political contest by which the peace of Tammany has been at various times disturbed, and of the present action of the Sachems. It will repay perusal.

On Saturday, the new Rabbi, Dr. ADLER, was installed over the congregation of Israelites worshiping in the synagogue in Twelfth-street. The services, which occupied over three hours, were of a very interesting character.

TIMOTHY MOHARTY was sentenced in the United States District Court to pay a fine of $10 for embezzling mail bags. The lowest sentence was given allowed by the law, because it appeared doubtful whether the prisoner knew that they were mail bags, or had any guilty intent in receiving them at his junk shop.

NOEL BROOKS, one of the crew of the bark N. W. Bridge, was also sentenced to pay a fine of $10 for an endeavor to make a revolt, and to pay a fine of $10, and be imprisoned for 30 days, for an assault upon the mate of the bark with a block.

The United States Grand Jury enter upon their session to-day. The case of Ex-Consul FARRAND and Captain BOURON, the filibusters, is the leading case of importance to be acted upon. Aside from this the only charge of interest to be examined into is the charge of murder of the Captain and cook of the brig General Pierce preferred against four of the brig's crew.

There were only 411 deaths in the City last week—a decrease of 24 compared with the returns of the previous week.

Rev. Dr. CHEEVER delivered, last night, "by request," another sermon on the duties of the people in reference to the recent decision of the Supreme Court as to the civil rights, or, rather, want of civil rights of the colored race in this country. His discourse was based on the text "The Powers that be are ordained of God." In its general scope and tendency it was essentially similar to lectures which have been heretofore delivered by the reverend gentleman on the same subject. His argument practically would run thus: Major—God never meant that we should obey the powers that be when they pervert their authority by the promulgation of unrighteous law. Minor—The Supreme Court by its late decisions declaring that negroes had no rights which a white man ought to respect, promulgated unrighteous law. Conclusion—Therefore, God never meant that we should obey the Supreme Court.

The new edifice of the Reformed Dutch Church of Jersey City, situated on the site of the old edifice in Grand-street, between Washington and Warren, was dedicated yesterday.

The Republicans of Jersey City will hold a mass Covention at Park Hall this evening to nominate a candidate for Mayor.

On Saturday Mr. BURDETT STRYKER received official notice of his appointment to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of JEROME BYRNSON, Sheriff of Kings County. He will fill his bonds to-day, and enter upon the duties of the office to-morrow. Mr. STRYKER was the Republican candidate for this office when BYRNSON was elected and his appointment now meets the entire approbation of all true Republicans.

A man named ANDREW BURNELL, residing in the Third Police District of Brooklyn, on Saturday evening knocked his wife down stairs, breaking one of her legs and fracturing her skull. She was taken to the Hospital in a dangerous condition by an officer, who also arrested BURNELL, and committed him to await the result of the injuries to his wife.

The Police of Pestilence.

The season is close at hand now when the alarmists may begin to be busy again, and rumors of coming evil and of inevitable calamity will fill our hearts with uncertainty and our homes with terror. We shall hear intolerable things of the condition of our streets, and of advancing "cycles of contagion," and all kinds of precautions will be suggested, and the Quarantine question will be debated with renewed fury, and then nothing will be done, and the Summer will come and go, and those of us who survive into the Fall will forget how badly we were frightened in the Spring, the anxieties that came up with the first blades of grass withering away at the first touch of the frosty fingers of Winter.

New-York concerns itself about its health, as it concerns itself about almost everything else, simply under the spur of a "sensation," and wastes upon a vague emotional excitement about possible "yellow fever," the public feeling which should concentrate itself for the control of the present and permanent pestilences of filth and neglect, which are not only the continual affliction, but the certain stronghold of whatever epidemic may in the course of time and fortune invade our City limits.

No population in the world is more charitably disposed, as we firmly believe, than the population of New-York, and no people claim for themselves so high a rank as we in the matter of public spirit and practical ability; and yet our charities are more imperfectly organized, and our public interests more clumsily and carelessly administered than those of any second-rate European capital.

This we say not in the way of mere declamatory fault-finding, but as a prelude to a positive illustration which is furnished us by the condition of our Dispensary system. In the police of pestilence the Dispensary fills a place analagous to that of the reformatory prison in the police of crime. The physicians of the Dispensary are the preventive officers of our sanitary system—it is their function to arrest all diseases, whether of local or of foreign origin, in the beginning of their career; and among those classes of the population who are too poor to command the services of the paid physician, but not too insignificant to serve as the besieging lines of the terrible army of Death, from which, as from a vantage ground, the batteries of the plague may be opened with irresistible fury upon the whole community. The higher or lower average condition of the public health is one of the most essential elements to be taken into the account in estimating the probability of the approach of any pestilence, and the extent of the danger to be apprehended from it; and the average condition of the public health is influenced to an almost incredible extent by the sanitary state of the technically "lower" and most numerous classes. A large proportion of these classes must depend upon the service of the Dispensary for that prompt and efficient supervision of their health which it is easy for their more fortunate fellow-citizens to command, but which is needed by none so much as by those who are least able to secure it for themselves. Yet what is the actual dispensary force of our great City, and how faithfully is it supported by our citizens?

The City is divided into five Dispensary Districts, all of which are served by private Societies independent of each other, and only acting in concert so far as may seem desirable to their respective officers. Objectionable as is this absence of unity in the operations of a system so vitally essential to the public welfare, it might yet be compensated for, in a great measure, by the activity of the individual Institutions, were these Institutions severally maintained at the point of proper efficiency by the citizens of their several Districts. That such, however, is not the case seems to us sufficiently clear from a perusal of the annual report of the "New-York Dispensary" which has been recently issued. This Dispensary, which was the first established in the City, having been founded in 1790, was, for more than thirty years, the only institution of the kind, and still extends its ministrations over a larger district than any of its present coadjutors; its present condition may, therefore, be fairly enough taken as a type of the actual state of the Dispensary interest in New-York.

In the district served by the "New-York Dispensary," are included some of the most dangerous portions of the City—the Five Points, and the waterside on both our eastern and our western limits, below Spring-street and Pike-street—that is, just those portions of the City and just those classes of our population most exposed to the first attack of a pestilence and most likely to afford it a fatal lodgment. That these most dangerous quarters of New-York are also the most suffering quarters of New-York, that these crowded and filthy streets which invite death from abroad are the homes also of misery without a name, we should be sorry to forget, or to suffer our readers to forget—but our object now is rather to dwell upon the general importance to the general welfare of a proper preventive medical police in these unclean and degraded regions of our metropolitan world, than to call the attention of Christian citizens to the pressing personal wants of their inhabitants.

Within these limits swarm some hundred thousand human beings, whose sanitary condition may be roughly inferred from the fact that more than twenty-five thousand of them annually appear as patients at the Dispensary, while over fifteen thousand annually require the services of the Dispensary physicians at their homes. The reader who will give himself the trouble to imagine the probable state of such a population if deprived of the gratuitous services of a competent medical staff, will form some adequate conception of the importance of the work done by this single Dispensary. He will not, however, form any adequate conception of the work which remains to be done—for that which is accomplished is accomplished only by the partial devotion of twenty physicians, whose constant services are imperatively required by the state of the District, but cannot be commanded by the Dispensary from the want of adequate pecuniary means. Ten of these physicians indeed receive no salary at all, while the six "District Physicians" who have the care of the patients in their homes, and discharge the wearing duties of a medical police, are magnificently recompensed with a sum which we are almost ashamed to mention. Two hundred dollars per annum are allotted to each of the men who, by night and by day, are engaged in defending these sanitary outworks of our City! while the entire annual income of this particular Dispensary amounts to less than six thousand dollars, and one of its officers has actually been obliged, during the past year, to advance from his own pocket a portion of this paltry sum to meet the necessary expenditure of the institution!

Is it not utterly discreditable to us that such statements should be presented to the world? Every citizen has it in his power, by a small annual subscription to the Dispensary of his own particular District, to do his share towards increasing the efficiency of these invaluable institutions—but the force of public opinion ought to be brought to bear upon the City Government so as to elicit positive assistance from the municipal income, to a system which should not be left to rely entirely upon private benevolence for its support. That the police of the public health in a city like ours should be handed over to private hands is just as disgraceful to us as it would be to confide to private hands the police of the public peace.

Progress and Promise of the Street-Cleaning Reform.

The attention of those who are interested in the health and cleanliness of New-York City cannot be too earnestly directed to the fact, that to-day is the day when the contracts which have recently been made by the Commissioner of Streets and Lamps, under the superintendence, and with the sanction of the Mayor and Comptroller, are to be submitted to the Common Council for approval. Section 12 of the Act of April 12, 1853, to amend the charter of this City, provides that all work to be done for the Corporation shall be done by contract, and that "all contracts, when given, shall be given to the lowest bidder with adequate security." It is also provided that such contracts shall be submitted to the Common Council for approval. In the case of street-cleaning, the express condition is attached to the tax-bill, which recently passed the Legislature, that the $250,000 appropriated shall only be expended under contract. This was intended to shut off the possibility of frauds, similar to those which were practiced by certain Aldermen, in collusion with Mr. ERLING, subsequently to July, 1855.

If the protestations of Mr. ERLING upon the subject are to be credited, he is really anxious at the present time to do justice to the City. As it is next to impossible for him, in this instance, to evade the law, he is desirous of letting it take its course. He has signed the contracts under which the gentlemen who are now in charge of the streets are acting, and has not hesitated to say, in public and private, that their character and zeal are unexceptionable, and that the security they have given is as good as could be offered. The Comptroller is also convinced that a fair prospect for the coming year is opened by the arrangement which has been made, and so is the Mayor. Moreover, the citizens of New-York can bear witness that they have begun, during the past week, to enjoy the novel spectacle of cleansed thoroughfares. The mob law by which Mr. REYNOLDS was interrupted on Monday and Tuesday, the continuance of the nuisance, by which he was rendered unable to procure laborers and carts on Wednesday and Thursday, and the immense amount of work to be done, are sufficient reasons why some portion of the mountains of mud, garbage, refuse and offal, which rendered the pavements in many places invisible, still remain; but, in spite of every obstacle, much has been already accomplished. Broadway, Maiden-lane, Broad, Wall, Nassau, Beekman, Pine, Liberty, Cedar, Greenwich, Cortlandt, Fulton, Spruce and Pearl streets, and others down town, as well as whole Wards in the upper part of the City, have been gone over, and thousands of loads of abomination have been dug out and taken away. Certain parts of the City have been cleansed for the first time within the memory of man. We learn, also, that Mr. REYNOLDS [illegible] of his dealings with the City may be [illegible] every one, to publish [illegible] of the number of loads of filth removed in his thirteen Wards. The machines will come into action during the present week, and the streets already in order, he says that he will keep so.

Notwithstanding these facts, we regret to learn that the most violent opposition with a sole view to spoils has sprung up among members of the Corporation against the new contracts. We are willing to believe that the refractory individuals are few in number, and that their conduct is discountenanced by the gentlemen who preside over the two branches of the Common Council. The Mayor has also exerted his influence towards securing the welfare of the City. The memory of past times revives, however, such strong temptations in the minds of those City Fathers, who "toil not, neither do they spin," but simply vegetate upon the rich soil of the Treasury, that they set from simple natural impulse, is laboring for the restoration of the dishonest days in which corruption has thriven, and they have prospered with it. They consider the words "reform," "retrenchment," "the public good," as insulting to their character, and as an encroachment upon their prerogatives. They will be prepared to rise up as one man to night and protest against the usurpation of the Mayor, and of Comptroller FLAGG, in taking the bold step of insisting that the streets of the City shall be cleaned, and that the Treasury shall be no longer swindled. The order, efficiency, and system which are beginning to spring up, they will condemn as an organized conspiracy against their law—that is, their inalienable privilege of stealing, robbing, log-rolling, and being bribed.

The sole and only object of the statute, in providing that contracts shall be submitted to the Common Council at all, is that the Corporation may judge whether the security provided is adequate. In the present case, there is no room for cavilling whatsoever upon this point. In past days, care has been taken that the security offered should be wholly worthless. Good security would have frightened the plundering members of the two Boards into something like refractoriness. It may do so now; but it will be the duty of the public to watch their course, and to secure at all hazards that the public welfare shall be no longer sacrificed. It is literally now or never, in relation to the sanitary state of this metropolis.

The Four Great Pictures.

We alluded last week to the remarkable commissions given by a gentleman in the neighborhood of New-York to four of our eminent portrait painters, for a picture by each containing the portraits of thirty illustrious cotemporary Americans. We believe it is no longer a secret that the liberal patron of art who gives the order is Hon. WILLIAM WRIGHT of Newark, N. J. The magnitude and singularity of the commission have caused a good deal of talk among our artists. Mr. HUNTINGTON is to paint the men of science, Mr. HICKS the illustrious literati, Mr. BAKER the artists, and Mr. ROSSITER the magnifices of the mercantile world.

It will be no very difficult matter to get together thirty men of science, of literature, and of art, though there may be some difficulty in grouping them; but where are the thirty eminent merchants to be found, and what is to be the standard of greatness with merchant princes? How many millions must a merchant have accumulated to entitle him to pictorial honors? Every man should be painted with his bank book in his hand, in which his wealth should be inscribed. Of all human greatness there is none so brittle as that of a merchant; he may be the greatest man in Wall-street to-day, and a nobody to-morrow. We have a few eminent men who have amassed fortunes by trade, but they have achieved greatness by other deeds than those connected with their calling.

As Mr. WRIGHT is himself a mechanic, and made his money which he expends so liberally by the useful business of a saddler, he should appropriate one picture to great American mechanics, of whom we have many bright examples. And as he has been a Senator, why not give another to illustrious cotemporary statesmen? It would, to be sure, involve the necessity of putting men together in one frame who were never in the same frame of mind, but Art and History know no prejudices; and they group their subjects without any consideration for their affinities.

TRINITY CHURCH MATTERS—THE QUESTION OF TITLE.—The onslaught upon Trinity Church continues to engage the attention of the Legislature, and, to a very considerable extent, that of the people also. The importance of the action which may be taken cannot well be exaggerated,—but it is one of those cases in which the Judge is even more interested in the issue of the trial than the prisoner at the bar. The Legislature and the political power represented by it, will be far more profoundly affected by the result of the contest than the Corporation of Trinity Church can possibly be. The latter—if the case goes against them—can appeal to the Courts of Law:—the former, if its action shall trample upon those principles of justice which lie at the basis of individual property, must pay the penalty.

If Trinity Church has a valid legal title to her property, she will hold it—in spite of clamor, whether embodied in Legislative enactments or not. Almost every other question but that of title has been loudly and vehemently discussed:—yet this point, upon which the whole case must ultimately turn, seems quite as clear as words can make it. The property in question was granted in the first years of the last century to "the Rector and Inhabitants of the City of New-York in communion with the Protestant Church of England." Now if the grant had been without any reference to a preëxisting state of things, and merely to "the Inhabitants of the City of New-York in communion with the Protestant Church of England," there would be no doubt, that all such inhabitants would now have a right in the property so granted. But the grant was made in those terms, because that was the name of a corporate body, and that body consisted of "the Rector and Inhabitants," aforesaid. Now what is the force of the important word "rector" here? A rector, according to all the authorities legal, canonical, and lexicographical, in the English language, from 1600 to the present day, is "a person or clergyman who has the charge of a parish church, and has the tithes," &c. This Rector of New-York then [illegible] parish was made, by law, the parish corporation with the City, [illegible] in law, called the parish of the Rector, Inhabitants, &c., of New-York; neither was the parish created, except in a purely legal and technical sense, by its charter. It had a recognized existence before the charter was granted; and in that very charter, this parish—of which the rector in question was made the head—is specifically named as "the Parish of Trinity Church;" and it is to the rector of this parish, in terms, that the grant was made. To that parish, then, and not to any number of individuals, as such, was this property granted; and while that parish exists, to it that property belongs.

It is difficult too see how any church corporation can hold the ground on which its place of worship stands, by a clearer title; and no less difficult to understand, why the movement to deprive Trinity Church of her property should be in a great measure sustained by gentlemen whose worldly interests would be much damaged were all titles to real estate scanned with as little consideration as they would have shown to that by which Trinity Church holds hers.

REMOVAL OF BARS IN THE HUDSON RIVER.—A bill is now before the Legislature appropriating $25,000 for the improvement of navigation in the upper Hudson. The session is so near its close that there is considerable doubt about its passing. A good deal of money has been expended in years past for this purpose, but without any permanent benefit. The United States Government has made two appropriations of $50,000 each, but two-thirds of that sum was consumed for surveys—each succeeding engineer unnecessarily going over the same ground. The State has also contributed a few thousands.

At least $100,000 is believed to be requisite to make the proposed improvement stable and permanent, with the addition of, perhaps, $5,000 per annum thereafter. The plan would be to stop up the north ends of the islands and force the water at all times to run through the same central channel. Twenty-five granal boats, filled with stones and sunk, would give eight or nine feet on the bars at low water. This would be amply sufficient, as the largest boats when loaded seldom draw more than seven feet of water. Of course, $25,000, if obtained from the Legislature, will be only sufficient to remove the bar, and answer as a temporary expedient.

This is an unpromising time to go to Albany for State aid, as the Treasury, already depleted, is sorely pressed by all manner of projects; but the friends of the bill are willing to accept of little, it seems, rather than get nothing.

THE SOUTH MANUFACTURING FOR THE NORTH.—The Savannah Republican contains the following paragraph:

"It is rather strange to see printing paper sent to the North; but, singular as it may appear, such is the fact. The Pioneer Paper Factory at Athens, Ga., is shipping paper to Philadelphia for the use of the Philadelphia Inquirer. It is a very superior article, and reflects credit on the manufactory. A lot goes forward by the next Philadelphia steamer."

For the last year a considerable portion of the paper on which the DAILY TIMES has been printed has come from a manufacturing establishment in North Carolina;—and the only reason why we do not use more of it is, that we cannot get it. It is fully equal, and in most respects decidedly superior, to any we can obtain at the North for the same price. We trust we shall not bring anybody into peril by thus revealing the fact that we are in part supplied with printing paper from the Slave-holding States. There is no reason, but their own negligence and lack of enterprise, why our fellow-citizens of the South should not wage successful competition with the North in this and many other branches of manufacture. We shall be happy to "encourage" them by our "patronage"—whenever we can make anything by it.

Installation of Rev. Dr. Adler, the New Jewish Rabbi.

On Saturday morning, the Synagogue in Twelfth-street, between Third and Fourth avenues, belonging to the Emanuel Congregation of Reformed Jews, was the scene of a very interesting ceremony,—the installation of a new Rabbi, long eminent for his learning and high position among the Hebrews. The Synagogue was crowded by its usual congregation, by members of other Synagogues, and by not a few Christians, who were anxious to witness a ceremony to them so novel, and, in its associations, so venerable and solemn. The Rabbi to be installed was Rev. Dr. ADLER, who arrived a few days since from Prussia, in the steamer Arago, to succeed the late Rev. Dr. MERZBACHER, whose sudden death took place last year. The observances in this Synagogue are somewhat peculiar, differing from those of the "Orthodox" Hebrew in several particulars. For instance, males and females are permitted to sit together, as in Christian churches, and are not divided as in other Synagogues, the men occupying the body of the edifice and the women the galleries. The reading-desk, pulpit, ark of the covenant, scroll of the law, are placed at one end of the temple, instead of the reading-desk being in the centre of the Synagogue. The man do not use the blue-fringed white praying veil, which is considered indispensable to decorum among the unreformed Jews.

The services on Saturday were conducted in Hebrew and German. Rev. Dr. ADLER preached a long sermon, in German, taking for his text the 23d chapter of Exodus, 24th verse, which reads as follows in our English version: "Therefore, now go lead the people into the place of which I have spoken to thee. Behold, mine angel shall go before thee." The discourse seemed largely to interest the congregation who are henceforth to be under Dr. ADLER's charge, and who, we understand, are all Germans. The finances of the Synagogue are in a very flourishing condition.

Dr. ADLER was somewhat unfortunate on his arrival in this country. A trunk containing a quantity of silver-ware, and several valuable Hebrew and German manuscripts, was stolen from aboard the steamer, as she lay at her dock. The reverend Rabbi regrets the loss of the manuscripts far more than the property which to the thief is most valuable.

Yellow Fever at Rio.

The bark Nameaug came into Quarantine night before last from Rio, making the passage in fifty days. The Captain reports that yellow fever, in its worst form, is raging there, and that very few of the crews of northern vessels, trading there, escape an attack of the pestilence. The crew of the Nameaug were all taken with the disease and sent to the hospital, which rendered it necessary for the Captain to ship a new crew before he could sail for this port. Some of the vessels, finding the pestilence raging, took in cargo in a hurry and put to sea, hoping thereby to escape the scourge; but, alas, they were not out many days before they were obliged to put back again with all hands disabled or dead with yellow fever.

☞ The firemen are becoming obstreperous. Rival companies are constantly coming in hostile collision, and for some weeks past they have indulged in a fight at almost every fire. They had two pretty "messes" yesterday, though none of them ended seriously. This business should be nipped in the bud. Let the Commissioners, the Police and locusts act quickly.

There were in this port on Saturday 560 vessels, including 31 steamers, 111 ships, 81 barks, 66 brigs, and 314 schooners.

NEW-YORK LEGISLATURE.

SENATE....ALBANY, Saturday, April 4.

A large number of petitions were presented urging the adoption of the exterior line of the New-York Harbor Commissioners.

Mr. BROOKS presented a memorial from the Common Council of New-York, against the Metropolitan Police bill.

Mr. C. P. SMITH reported a bill providing regulations for the port of New-York. This is one of a series of bills recommended by the Harbor Commissioners to promote the preservation of the harbor. It prevents the throwing of ashes, cinders, &c., from steamboats anywhere below Spuyten Devil Creek, Throg's Neck, or inside of Sandy Hook; provides, that no rubbish or earth shall be thrown into any of the slips, or deposited on the piers or docks, except to cart away; puts all the regulations in the hands of the Board of Commissioners established in 1858, and puts Harbor Masters and Port Wardens under the control of said Board.

Mr. BROOKS reported bills creating a uniform standard of gas and appointing a Gas Inspector. He said the lateness of the session precluded the possibility of proper consideration of the bills, and the Committee, therefore, could not recommend action on them, but reported so that the parties concerned might be prepared to bring the matter up next session.

Mr. KELLY reported on the condition of the Savings Banks in the State, and paid a high compliment to the officers of those Institutions for the able manner in which, almost without exception, they had managed the trust reposed in them.

Indian Atrocities in Iowa.

MURDEROUS ATTACK ON A WHITE SETTLEMENT AT THE HEAD WATERS OF THE DES MOINES RIVER.

PITTSBURG, Saturday, April 4.

A letter received here from a responsible source, dated Fort Dodge, Iowa, March 23, says that a settlement of twenty families at the head waters of the Des Moines River had been attacked by Indians, and that it was supposed that all were murdered. Only two houses were visited by the persons bringing the news, in which fourteen dead bodies were found. Some had been shot, and others inhumanly clubbed to death. It is presumed that the whole number of persons composing the settlement were killed, or that they are now in captivity. A meeting of citizens was called on the 22d ult., and a company of fifty to one hundred men had organized to march to take vengeance on the Indians and rescue any persons that might be found with them.

THE HARBOR COMMISSIONERS.

Wharves, Piers and Slips not Property—All Land, Stores and Houses Must of Pearl, and West of Greenwich Streets, Without Title.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

So say the Harbor Commissioners. The State had no right to grant, and individuals no right to hold anything below high water mark. This is the doctrine held forth at Albany, and the Legislature is invoked to set at naught any and every grant heretofore made, to corporations or individuals, if it suits Harbor Commissioners or theoretic engineers to say that they interfere with navigation, and to make no provision for indemnifying the grantees, however great the damage done them by interfering with what has heretofore been considered vested rights. They are not content to take from us the control and management of our property, but they must cut off and destroy what they please, without compensation or award for damage. These same Harbor Commissioners unblushingly recommend that the Legislature pass laws to cut off and take up property which has been built by owners at great expense, under a grant of the highest authority of the State, relying upon its good faith, and when asked to make an estimate of what would be the probable cost of removal and restoration, or what damage would equitably grow out of such an interference with vested rights, evade the questions under the fear that it would kill their bills, and well they might fear the consequence of such a statement, for it would be strange indeed if any Legislative body could be found willing to subject the State to claims amounting to millions of dollars, for so questionable a benefit. To say that such assumptions are outrageous and immoral, "would savor much of commonplace and seem to court" discussion, but to that they indicate a want of ability in those who set them up to judge of right, or see the wrongs of that regard for moral obligation which would warrant a public trust, hereafter, is to say the least that truth requires or justice calls for.

A DOCK OWNER.

We publish the above at the request of an intelligent and respectable merchant, who gives his name as a voucher for the truth of its statements. We find it very difficult to believe that the gentlemen composing the Harbor Commission hold any such doctrines, or seek to establish any such rules of action as are here attributed to them.

Taking an Alien's bed for a Militia Fee.

DENNIS MURPHY, Esq., writes to us complaining of Mr. MOXSIE, of the New-York State Militia, because he wanted him to pay 75 cents Militia tax, or else submit to a fine of $3 85. DENNIS MURPHY, Esq. considers such conduct unlawful, as he has "only taken out his first papers." He states that he complied with the regulations so far as going to drill or parade on the 12th of October, 1866, as did about one hundred more. They waited at the place half a day, but neither Captain nor Marshal appeared to drill them. He asks information on the subject, and some direction as to the course most proper for him to pursue. His pressing reason is, that Mr. MOXSIE says he will take the bed from under him if he does not pay him within twenty-four hours. As a bed is all the property Mr. MURPHY claims in his own right, he does not wish to lose it, if he can help it. If Mr. MURPHY is correct in all he states, we advise him to remain quiet until Mr. MOXSIE calls for the bed, and then if he lets Mr. MOXSIE take it without opposition, he doesn't deserve to have one.

Marine Matters.

The ship Helena, concerning which some anxiety has been felt, is reported in Wilmer & Smith's European Times as having arrived at Amoy on the 15th of October.

Three or four sailor runners came near being drowned while towing alongside the ship Ontario, from the Quarantine, on Saturday. The boat was filled and sunk, the men having only time to escape into the ship's chains, minus boat, oars, sails and their coats.

Coroners' Inquests.

An inquest was held on Saturday upon the body of JAMES CLOUGHESSY, second steward of the steamship Arctic, who was drowned on Thursday night while attempting to get on board that vessel, at the foot of King-street. Deceased was a native of Ireland, and 30 years of age.

A child, three years of age, named MCSHANY, while playing with matches, set fire to its clothes, and so burned itself that it died soon afterwards.

Fires.

IN CEDAR-STREET.

At 11½ o'clock Saturday night a fire broke out in the four-story building No. 157 Cedar-street, occupied by RECKNOW & LARNE, manufacturers of and dealers in pickles, preserves, &c., whose loss amounts to about $6,000. They are insured for $7,500—$2,500 each in the Jefferson, Hanover, and Washington Insurance Companies. The building was damaged to the extent of $1,000—insured. The food store of JAMES DAVENT, Nos. 98 and 99 West-street, was damaged by water to the amount of about $500—insured. The store of SIMONS, RANDOLPH & Co., Commission Merchants, No. 100 West-street, was also somewhat damaged by water. The building in West-street was damaged to the extent of $500.

IN BOWERY EXTENSION.

About 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon a fire broke out in an unoccupied new building in the Bowery extension, near Oliver street. It was soon put out, and the damage done was not large. The fire is believed to have been maliciously set.

IN EAST THIRD-STREET.

About 12 o'clock Saturday night, a fire broke out in the building No. 144 East Third-street, occupied by a Mr. BAKER (the owner of the building) as a wheelwright and blacksmith shop, and by PHILIP KLAG and JOHN SEMPT, cabinet makers. The damage done is estimated at $1,000.

FIRE ON STATEN ISLAND.

About 12 o'clock on Saturday night a fire broke out in a hay shed at Vanderbilt's landing, (S. I.,) owned by WM. VANDERBILT. A large quantity of bale hay was destroyed. Loss about $1,000, no insurance. The fire is supposed to be the work of an incendiary.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

The Courts.

The April term of the Supreme and Superior Courts will commence to-day. There are no cases of particular public interest expected to be brought on this term, if we except an interesting habeas corpus case to be heard before Judge ROOSEVELT, in regard to a child named Grace M. Paulding. The facts of this case have been fully given in the TIMES. There will be two Circuits, held by Judges ROOSEVELT and PEABODY. Justice CLERKE will sit at Special Term, and Judge MITCHELL will attend to the Chamber business. Judge DAVIES will hold the Oyer and Terminer.

In the Surrogate's Court there are several important Will cases still pending examination. The first in importance in the interest felt in it by the public at large is the examination as to the alleged marriage of Mrs. Cunningham and Dr. Burdell. It is hardly probable the examination will be completed during the present month. The next will of importance, as involving the largest amount of money, is the Parish Will case. It will be probably two or three months before this case is concluded. The contested Will cases of Henry Erving, Mrs. Harriet Clayton, and Jo-

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT—APRIL 4.

Before Judge Betts.

Terence Moriarty, who had pleaded guilty to an indictment for embezzling mail bags belonging to the United States, was brought up for sentence. The mail bags in this case not being worth $20, the offence did not amount to a felony. Affidavits of previous good character were read in his behalf, and Mr. Phillips, his counsel, stated that he kept a junk shop, and bought waste paper in these bags from parties who said they would sell for them again, but never did so. The Court imposed upon him only a fine of $10, the lowest punishment allowed by the law; but said if any such case came before the Court showing any guilty knowledge, the punishment should be severe.

Noel Brooks, a colored man, convicted of an assault upon the mate of the bark R. W. Bridge, with a block, was sentenced to pay a fine of $10, and an imprisonment of thirty days, and for an endeavor to make a revolt on board, of which he was convicted, he was sentenced to pay a fine of $10.

John Brown, convicted with Brooks of endeavoring to make a revolt, having been imprisoned since last November, and suffering under ill health, was also brought up, and the Court suspended sentence, and ordered him to be discharged on his own recognizance

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Hon. Justice Duer.

DECISIONS.

Chas. Jones vs. Wm. W. Hart.—Order of arrest granted.

James C. Wicker vs. Horace Drescer.—Motion that answer be made more definite and certain. Granted in part, and in part denied. No costs to either party.

Cornelius G. Smith and others vs. Alpheus K. Smith.—Application for a Stillwell warrant granted.

James L. Cheesoman vs. James H. Sturges and others.—Motion to dissolve injunction. Injunction modified so as to limit it to $20,000 of the $150,000 of stock mentioned therein, and to restrain defendants from selling $105,000 of the residue at a less cost than may be sufficient to reimburse their advances. As to the balance, ($20,000,) injunction wholly dissolved.

Edward Le Huray and another vs. J. W. Delamater.—Case settled.

Shubael A. Darling vs. David Jackson et al.—Case settled.

Before Hon. Justice Woodruff.

OLE BULL'S JEWELRY AGAIN.

John Hopper vs. Ole Bull.—This celebrated defendant was brought before the Court on Saturday on proceedings supplementary to execution. It was alleged that he possessed personal property of considerable value, which he had fraudulently concealed from his creditors. It was also alleged that he was about to sail for Norway.

Upon the examination Mr. Bull admitted that he had three violins worth about $2,000. In the bow of one of these violins is quite a valuable diamond. He denied any immediate plan for leaving the United States, though he stated that he intended eventually to visit his native land.

The counsel for Mr. Bull, Mr. Bulckley, contended that this examination was illegal, as no demand had been made on the defendant for the application of this property to pay his debts.

His Honor decided that this specific demand should have been made, and that a general demand was insufficient. He therefore discharged the defendant from the examination. The demand will probably be made, and, if not complied with, the proceedings will be renewed.

COMMON PLEAS—GENERAL TERM.—April 4.

Before Judges Ingraham, Daly and Brady.

DECISIONS.

Philip Weber vs. Frederick Reuk.—Judgment reversed with costs.

Peter R. Strong vs. The Rippowam Company.—Judgment reversed and case referred back to referee, either party to produce further testimony; costs of trial and appeal to abide event.

The Mayor et al. vs. Michael Dooley.—Judgment reversed and judgment rendered for defendant on demurrer, with leave to amend on payment of costs.

James Harris vs. Hy Hypock.—Judgment reversed on payment of costs and order of reference.

George Young vs. J. F. Gimbrede.—Judgment affirmed with costs.

William A. Ketcltas vs. Isaac C. Delaplaine.—Judgment reversed. New trial ordered unless plaintiff within ten days remits $46 50, in which case judgment is affirmed for residue with costs.

John F. Cunningham vs. David Jones.—Judgment reversed and case referred back to referee, costs to abide event, either party to be allowed to produce further testimony.

☞ The April term of the Brooklyn City Court before Judge CULVEN, for civil business, will be opened to-day, when the calendar will be taken up.

HOUSE FURNISHING BUSINESS.

This morning, a consignment of shawls from a house of the late Great Emporium, Broadway, corner of Bleecker-st., was received. The carman who delivered them could not be paid his $1 50, as the Cashier was out, and had he been in the result would have been the same, for he was not only out but absolutely out of funds. That carman called the following P. M. and received Money.

HOW?

Another creditor consigned an invoice of chairs the following morning, and one they were displayed one hour upon that convicted from corner of 10th-st., adjoining

GRACE CHURCH.

One dozen were sold at a profit of $2. Then the cashier was not only in the store but in funds—Ogden $2. German called—gold—looked as happy as people look when they have their pass pay. Next, a consignment of fowls or dosters, not from a creditor, but from a good witness, at the proper time, in relation to the grand break up.

NOS. 46 AND 48 BROADWAY.

They were scarcely opened and marked but those magnificent show windows had them in their bearing; and so fine and fresh they looked that the public could not help to buy them. Result, the cash account loomed up with a fair profit. Verse 4. No. 4 was a consignment of

BIRD CAGES.

Not from a creditor, but another good witness. They were not naked before one was sold at $4 50, affording a liberal bargain and sale to buyer and seller. Next, a consignment of mats, tin ware, brushes, wooden ware, baskets,

REFRIGERATORS,
PLATED GOODS,

mattresses, hat stands, bedsteads, &c., &c., so that the great—immense—elegant big store already looks a kind of nice and somewhat full. The goods are fresh, and on sale for the benefit of the public and of the most reputable merchants and manufacturers in the City, by

SO

SAID ROBERT DAVIS, AGENT.

His receipt book shows with what success, and those beautiful East River bank checks flying through the different banks—no kiting—solid, good as gold, give daily pleasure to the consignees, and are long joy and happiness to the creditors of the late Great Emporium, Broadway, corner of Bleecker-st.

AND WHY?

Cash receipts over $800 last week. Gross expenses only $61. No rent until 1st of May. Profits—give a guess. Pretty good from so small a stock. No gaps has grown under the feet of any of the employees of the GREAT BAZAAR FOR HOUSEKEEPERS' WANTS.

My plan of doing business is founded upon a rock. I open at all times to the closest scrutiny of all just and honest creditors of the late Great Emporium, as also to all consignees, and also my books. There is nothing behind the curtain. If I die (the Great Bazaar is now an emporium) it will go on under any and all circumstances. I am right and can look any man in the face. If I live I shall yet come out with an honest character, worthy of my sire, the late Nathaniel Davis, of Albany, as Albany well knows he was an honest man.

Croak on ye croakers, fire away ye bitter enemies, let the cauldron of scandal be heated hot as hot can be, and its dirty, mean, scalding vapors sucked down by the calumniators of the late proprietor of the Great Emporium. He is dead in one sense, but mighty active just about now as Agent and Commission Merchant.

FEARS NOT

but in the justice of his cause is now invulnerable. A Jury of 12 men will yet pass judgment upon these 24 days of confinement in the Eldridge-st. jail. Bulletin No. 3 will be issued next week. ROBT. DAVIS, Agent.

APRIL.

The frolic month of April comes
And rustles through the leafy bowers,
Once more the busy wild-bee hums
Above the Spring's awakened flowers.
Long gleams of light, and passing showers,
And warbling birds on every spray,
Proclaim the favorite month of ours,
The jocund herald of sweet May.

The long, dark Winter-gloms have passed—
The long, bright Summer lies before us;
The buds are reappearing fast
And cloudlets skim cerulo kindly o'er us;—
All nature in a panting chorus,
Proclaims the time of MUFFLING gone—
And Earth, the Mother Earth that bore us,
Prepares her new SPRING STYLE to don!

Let us be true to Nature still,
And do as she so wisely teaches—
While Spring re-clothes each plain and hill,
Let us put on new coats and breeches!
And heed ye Men who boldly stretches—
"Go where SHIVERS' under-shirts unfurled,
Their fame o'er all creation reaches
As the BEST CLOTHING IN THE WORLD?"

MEDICAL.

EVERYBODY LOVES HAPPINESS! To the advent of Sarsaparilla, the beleaguered, the worried and worn, shake—shake off that gloom which overwhelms and crushes—shake off that fear of future misery, which makes life a burden. Who would not wish to enjoy the most delightful season of the year in the full glow of healthy health and vigorous spirits? The most reliable means we know of to insure this is to administer the great blood purifier, KENNEDY'S SARSAPARILLA, which will purify the blood, invigorate the secretions, renew the worn-out tissues of the body, and prove the surest safeguard against a possible fit of sickness.

Prepared and sold by A. B. & D. SANDS, Druggists, No. 100 Fulton-st., New-York.

THE GREATEST MEDICAL DISCOVERY OF THIS AGE.—DR. KENNEDY, of Roxbury, has discovered in one of nature's secret hidden wonders a remedy that cure every kind of humor, from the worst scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over 1,100 cases, and never failed, even in two cases, both thunder humor. He has now in his possession over 200 certificates of its virtue, all within 20 miles of Boston.

Two bottles are warranted to cure a running ears month.

One to three bottles will cure the worst kind of pimples on the face.

Two to three bottles will clear the system of boils.

Two to three are warranted to cure the worst canker in the mouth or stomach.

Three to five bottles are warranted to cure the worst case of carbuncles.

One to two bottles are warranted to cure all humor in the eyes.

Two bottles are warranted to cure ringing of the ears and blotches among the hair.

Four to six bottles are warranted to cure scrurpt and running issues.

One bottle will cure scaly eruption of the skin.

Two to three bottles are warranted to cure the worst case of ringworm.

Two to three bottles are warranted to cure the most desperate case of rheumatism.

Three to four bottles are warranted to cure the salt rheum.

Five to eight bottles will cure the worst case of scrofula.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the above quantity is taken.

Reader, I publish over a thousand letters of this in the vicinity of Boston. I know the effects of it in every case. So sure as water will extinguish fire, so sure will this cure humor. I have sold a books of it but that sold another; other a friend always speaks for itself. There are two things about this that will appear to me surprising—first, that it grew in our pastures, and yet so powerful and so full of virtue; second, that it should cure all kinds of humor.

In order to give some idea of the sudden rise and popularity of the discovery, I will state that in April, 18 I peddled it, and sold about six bottles per day. In April, 19 I sold over a thousand bottles per day.

No change of diet ever necessary—eat the best you get, and enough of it.

DIMINISHING SCROFULOUS USE.—Adults, one table spoonful per day; children over 3 years, dessert spoonful; children from 6 to 9 years, tea spoonful. A slight direction can be applicable to all constitutions, take sufficient to operate on the bowels daily.

DR. KENNEDY gives personal attendance in bad cases of Scrofula.

THEY ARE FLYING IN OUT! People are just discovering that one-half the people die, not of disease, but of medicine! That the rich die of too much physic, and the rich die of too much food. "Licensed to kill," should be the sign over many a physician's door, for the bills of mortality, if properly examined, would show more actual murders through the ignorance of some of the faculty, than through the acts of all other kinds of [illegible] extent. Nine-tenths of all who die of consumption are deliberately murdered. So, too, of those who die of rheumatism, of palsy, of scrofula, of liver complaint and heart disease. MONDAY, April 6—A. M.

The European market accounts by the Asia, arrived at this port on Saturday from Liverpool, are to Saturday, March 21. The Cotton market was steady at Liverpool, and the trade at Manchester looking fair, although public attention was much engrossed in the approaching general election. At London, the Funds were ¼@⅝ ⅌ cent. higher, and Money in less pressing demand, particularly on the Stock Exchange. The Bank return was regarded as favorable, the difference in the Bullion, notwithstanding some heavy withdrawals for the Continent, being only $60,000, and the reserve of Notes on the increase. The market altogether had assumed a more steady appearance, and the news is the best for English financial affairs we have had for several weeks. The French Funds keep up to 71 for the 3 ⅌ cent. Rents, and Bank of France and Crédit Mobilier shares had advanced over the previous weekly quotations. The condition of the Bank was constantly improving. The monthly statement of March 12 shows a stock of Bullion of $14,497,000, and a further increase of $400,000 was realized the week following. In American Stocks in London, some considerable sales of Illinois Central shares were made at 133@134 sterling, 135 asked at the close, and of the Construction Bonds at 90@91 ex coupon, 92 asked at the close. The sales of other descriptions were unimportant, though prices are quoted steady.

We copy, in another place, a leader from the London Times on the American Railway system, the flattering tone of which will, no doubt, strike the reader on this side as in striking contrast with the unfair, not to say malignant spirit, shown toward this property in certain circles in Wall-street, which, for the time being, unfortunately domineer over the whole market. The basis of the English article referred to would seem to be the recent report to the British Board of Trade, made by Captain DOUGLASS GALTON, of the Royal Engineers, who was in this country last Summer, but it is quite evident that the principal editor of the London Times himself, has not only profited by this document, but drawn many of his very liberal conclusions, in regard to the extraordinary developments of the material prosperity of the United States, from his own personal observations during a brief visit to New-York and the Great West about the same time. We have little hope, in calling the attention to such evidences of the respect in which our system of Railways is held abroad, of diverting from their course the gentlemen of the Stock Exchange who rejoice in the name and purpose of consistent Bears against all Railway Securities. Their fresh career in this direction must needs be run, either to their own discomfiture as in December last, or to the annihilation of all public confidence, one by one, in the corporations against which their attacks are now leveled. This last is their prime object, of course, and they have not, in the opinion of a portion of the public, been without the aid and virtual coöperation of certain parties who, in the double capacity of Railway treasurers and Stock jobbers, have been willing to avail of the assaults upon the credit of their own companies to turn a penny in operating upon the distrust thus wickedly created. We have been loth to give credence to any such charge, but, even if well founded, the fault is not in the property itself. It is to be found in a laxity of mercantile principle which overrides all delicacy, or in the rentiness of stockholders is not promptly dispensing with the services of such officers. We leave others to determine which. It is not too much to say, however, that the public are becoming exceedingly restive under the state of things in Wall-street, and the issue must sooner or later be made between the power of reckless and unprincipled Stock-gambling to ruin the credit of a system which is challenging the admiration of Europe, while so wickedly assailed at home, and the ability of good men out of this Bearish circle to rescue it from such control. No reasonable man can doubt the latter, if once exercised to practical action. It has scarcely been four months since an illustration was afforded of the ease with which the most formidable attempt ever yet made to crush out values on the Stock Exchange, was itself signally floored. That it has been renewed, with the aid of other licentiates from the same school, and in a spirit even more unscrupulous, is not to be denied. The evidences of the fact the past week have been abundant. Thus far, success appears to attend it; though the end is not yet.

The latest discovery of this party is that a considerable number of the American lines are embarrassed in their finances, or fail to pay an income to the stockholders. In a system embracing twenty-six thousand miles, built up, as it were, from six to twenty-six in half a dozen years, it would be surprising if such were not the case. In the same period we have seen a considerable number of Banks explode or liquidate as unprofitable. Yet the American Banking system is sound. In the same period we have seen five or eight millions of steamship property, belonging to this City alone, fall into almost hopeless embarrassment, their shares running down to 30 ⅌ cent., as the Erie road shares did about the same time, yet the same species of property have made half a dozen gigantic fortunes, and part of that which was embarrassed in 1854 is now highly productive—as instance the Pacific Mail line. In the same period too, immense mistakes have been made in City and manufacturing property, in great hotels and greater warehouses and factories, yet the proportion of embarrassment is not such as to put the ban of public confidence upon the credit of these important interests.

But we go further, and availing of the occasion of copying what our English cotemporaries and an English engineer, reporting to his own Board of Trade, say of our railways. We point to their system in comparing the faults, mistakes and embarrassments, if you please, as well as temporary unproductiveness of a portion of our lines. We have 26,000 miles,—the English 8,500 miles. The list of their Railway stocks, as daily quoted on the London Exchange, shows a larger proportion of low-priced values than ours. Many of the lines were embarrassed by the back-set of 1847, as ours were by the mistakes of 1854. But for this the whole system is not black-balled on the Exchange, nor is there an English journal so poor and degraded in reputation, or lost to every sense of shame and decency, as to dare to impeach the credit and integrity of the Railways of Great Britain as a system to further the speculations of the Exchange, if such speculations were really directed (as they are not in London) to break down confidence in all values of this nature, much less to gloat over its own love of mischief and destruction.

On the contrary, the poor roads are cared for and constantly reformed and improved in management, and their shares brought up in market worth. The good ones are cherished and their Stocks, though paying only 2½, 3 or 4 ⅌ cent. per annum, held as valuable investments at from 68 to 85 ⅌ cent.; while the very best, paying only 5½ or 6 ⅌ cent. per annum, are made to rule at or above par. The 4 ⅌ cent. Midland Road of England, is appreciated here at 82 ⅌ cent., while our 8 ⅌ cent. New-York Central is borne down here to about the same figure.

The Foreign Trade at the port of New-York the past week shows the import entries to amount to $5,046,282, including the Dry Goods table in our last paper. For the week ending the 5th of April last year, the total was $6,804,978. The list of general merchandise for the week includes as much as $859,512 in Sugar and Molasses. The Export of Domestic Produce and Miscellaneous Goods for the week, amounted to $1,795,749, against $1,600,374 same week last year. The Export of Specie, more than half of which was in Foreign Coin recently received here and sent to the West Indies, amounted to $742,000, against $1,748,922 for the week ending April 5 last year. Every one of the items of Foreign Trade, it will thus be seen, compare favorably with the movement for the same week last year. The Arago, fol Havre on Saturday, took but $12,000 in Specie. The Fulton on the 5th of April, 1856, for the same destination, carried out $562,000. The Asia, from Liverpool, brought in $875,000 in Spanish Gold. The Sub-Treasury disbursed, during the week, $191,508 in excess of its receipts; the balance standing on Saturday afternoon, $15,289,566, against $15,481,074 at the close of the previous week. The Bank average for the week, to be made up this afternoon, is not likely to show any important difference from the average of last Monday, which stood $11,825,783.

The following is a comparative statement of the export, hence, of the leading articles of Domestic Produce and Miscellaneous Goods, for the week and the corresponding week of last year:

* These items were included in miscellaneous goods, in our export statement every week of last year. Hence, we cannot furnish comparative figures in detail, this year. Next year we shall be enabled to do so regularly, by keeping up the record as now arranged through the current year.

We are yet without the official Custom-House returns of the Foreign Trade at this port for the month of March, owing to the particularity with which the details are required to be made up at the close of the fiscal quarter of the year for transmission to Washington. They are promised, however, in a few days; so we again prefer to omit our usual comparison by weeks.

COURSE OF THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

	Saturday, March 28.	Saturday, April 4.		Saturday, March 28.	Saturday, April 4.
N. Y. Cen.	93¾	93¾	Virginia 6s	91⅞	91⅞
Erie	53¾	53⅞	Missouri 6s	84	83¾
Reading	72¾	70	Ohios of 1860	109¼	109¼
Mich. South	73¾	70¾	Californias	75	64	67
Toledo	79¾	73¾	Illinois Cen.	102	99ex.
Rock Island	107	105¾	Ill. C. Scrip	132¼	131
Mich. Central	95¾	94⅞	Erie of '75	92¾	91¾
Panama	96	96¾	Hud. Tunnels	66¾	65¾
Galena	103	103	Penn. Coal	95¾	95
Hudson Riv.	28¾	28	Del. & Hud.	122¾	122

The market through the week was irregular on part of the Railroad list, but generally lower at the close. The extreme fluctuations in Southern Michigan were from 74¾@69¾, and then to 71@70⅝ at the close; Erie varied about 1 ⅌ cent.; Reading, 1@1¼ ⅌ cent. closing the same as on Saturday week. Rock Island fell off 3 ⅌ cent. after the high rate paid to meet contracts maturing or called in for the closing of transfers. Illinois Central Scrip fell off 1¾ ⅌ cent., Panama the same, and Galena 1 ⅌ cent. There was some firmness shown on New-York and Erie on Friday and part of the day on Saturday, but after the close of the Second Board Street sales were made as low as 52⅝, on the calculation, we understand, that the Assembly at Albany may yet be induced, for the accommodation of the Bears, to refuse the Company the bill heretofore passed unanimously by the Senate to authorize the diversion of the Sinking Fund. The bill has already been reported and passed to a third reading in the Assembly, and there is little question that it will be finally granted, without serious objection, as the nature of the privilege asked for really involves none. The legal right of converting the Bonds of the Company, originally made convertible into shares, already exists, and a resolution of the Board of Directors now to authorize the conversion of the Bonds of 1875, of which over a million dollars have been bought in for the stockholders, in lieu of paying them cash dividends, would be as effectual as further legislation on the subject. But the other course was deemed more respectful, and the petition of the Company was at once granted by the Senate. The power and influence of the New-York Herald and the gentlemen in Wall-street who sell this and other New-York road Stocks by the five or ten thousand shares, short, to break them down, over the House of Assembly, are yet to be tested. The latter have made their boasts—we shall see in a few days with what authority.

The Money and Exchange Markets during the week worked in favor of increased means for employment on the Street, and a reasonable measure of ease was experienced by both Stock and Discount Brokers in borrowing money. The rates, at call, 7 ⅌ cent., and on prime paper, 8@9 ⅌ cent. The Foreign banking houses, since successfully advancing their Sterling bills to 108¾@108⅞, have been more disposed to lend Money for temporary employment.

Anthracite Coal Trade.

From the Philadelphia Ledger.

The Anthracite coal trade is gradually increasing, though the Lehigh Navigation Company has not yet commenced business. During the week ending on Saturday last, the Lehigh Valley Railroad brought down 7,733 tons, making for the season 34,734 tons. Last year the first published report of tonnage by this road was on the 19th of April, and the first by the Lehigh Navigation on the 16th of April; consequently the reported tonnage this year from the Lehigh mines is wholly in advance of tonnage to correspond ing time last year. The Reading Railway brought down for the week ending on Thursday last 27,314 tons, and for the year 447,669 tons, against 415,461 tons to the same time last year, being a gain of 32,209 tons. The Schuylkill Navigation Company has shipped for the week ending on Thursday 18,176 tons, being for the year 35,173 tons; all of which is in excess of last year's tonnage to the same time. The whole Anthracite tonnage thus far is 152,806 tons in excess of tonnage to corresponding date last year.

Per Asia.] LONDON, Friday, March 2—6 P. M.

The Colonial and Foreign Produce markets have been steady during the week, but without animation.

SUGAR and COFFEE firm. TEA, COTTON, and BREADSTUFFS dull.
